Moratorium vote tonight

The General Assembly will vote tonight on a resolution support- ing the October 15 Vietnam Moratorium. The move is expected to win widespread support for that movement on this campus.

At MIT, it is known that many top administrators favor making a statement of support for the Moratorium. At the faculty meeting of last Monday, President Howard Johnson stated his "ten- tative" reaction that, "That day could come." However, he did feel that the conciseness for this Institute. He added that classes could be officially cancelled only by vote of the faculty, but urged that the faculty not attempt to hold a regular business meeting out, that day.

Within the MIT faculty, a broadly-based ad hoc group met late yesterday afternoon to plan a faculty response to the Moratorium call. The action finally chosen by this group will depend to some extent upon the action taken by the student assembly in its meeting tonight, at 8 pm in the Press.

On Friday the Columbia Universi- ty Senate passed a resolu- tion denouncing current war policies and recommending immedi- ate withdrawal of US forces. The vote was 51 in favor, 25 against and three abstentions. The Sen- ate is a joint student-faculty-ad- ministration body which is the highest organ of government at Columbia. The group which restructured the un- ited administration which is the wide spread discontent with the old order.

At the University of Michi- gan, President Robben Fleming, stating his commitment to the campus as a university audience, on Sep- tember 19, endorsed massive troop withdrawals along the lines proposed by Clark Clifford and Robert McNamara. He promised university promised to those seeking to have the univer- sity put resources to war, and that if those combined resources of the university would fill the 15,000 capacity Events, he would "carry their message to the world."

In Congress, Sen. George McGovern, D-South Dakota, called for a resolution forbidding the use of US troops in Vietnam after December 1, 1970. In addition Sen. Fred Harris, chairman of the Democratic National Com- mittee, called a meeting of liber- al and moderate Democratic Congressmen last Friday. The group planning to "take the gloves off" on the issue of Vietnam. The group considered the possi- bility of joining down the lines on a October 15 in support of the Moratorium by keeping enough people in the hall in order to guarantee a quorum.

The group which is planning activities for the MIT student body will meet tomorrow evening in the East Lounge of the Student Center at 7:30 pm.

By Lee Giguere

Within a few weeks scientists from MIT will join the other scholars around the world at- tempting to pry the secrets of lunar geology from the moon rocks brought back by Apollo XI.

Gray relates that the past few months have been an "exciting experience" for him. He asserts that the various city depart- ments more relevant to the use of US troops in Vietnam after December 1, 1970. In addition Sen. Fred Harris, chairman of the Democratic National Com- mittee, called a meeting of liber- al and moderate Democratic Congressmen last Friday. The group planning to "take the gloves off" on the issue of Vietnam. The group considered the possi- bility of joining down the lines on a October 15 in support of the Moratorium by keeping enough people in the hall in order to guarantee a quorum.

The group which is planning activities for the MIT student body will meet tomorrow evening in the East Lounge of the Student Center at 7:30 pm.

By Bob Dennis

שusahaan serviço News Service Since 1851

The General Assembly will vote tonight on a resolution sup- porting the October 15 Vietnam Moratorium. The move is expected to win widespread support for that movement on this campus.

At MIT, it is known that many top administrators favor making a statement of support for the Moratorium. At the faculty meeting of last Monday, President Howard Johnson stated his "ten- tative" reaction that, "That day could come." However, he did feel that the conciseness for this Institute. He added that classes could be officially cancelled only by vote of the faculty, but urged that the faculty not attempt to hold a regular business meeting out, that day.

Within the MIT faculty, a broadly-based ad hoc group met late yesterday afternoon to plan a faculty response to the Moratorium call. The action finally chosen by this group will depend to some extent upon the action taken by the student assembly in its meeting tonight, at 8 pm in the US.

On Friday the Columbia Universi- ty Senate passed a resolu- tion denouncing current war policies and recommending immedi- ate withdrawal of US forces. The vote was 51 in favor, 25 against and three abstentions. The Sen- ate is a joint student-faculty-ad- ministration body which is the highest organ of government at Columbia. The group which restructured the un- ited administration which is the wide spread discontent with the old order.

At the University of Michi- gan, President Robben Fleming, stating his commitment to the campus as a university audience, on Sep- tember 19, endorsed massive troop withdrawals along the lines proposed by Clark Clifford and Robert McNamara. He promised university promised to those seeking to have the univer- sity put resources to war, and that if those combined resources of the university would fill the 15,000 capacity Events, he would "carry their message to the world."

In Congress, Sen. George McGovern, D-South Dakota, called for a resolution forbidding the use of US troops in Vietnam after December 1, 1970. In addition Sen. Fred Harris, chairman of the Democratic National Com- mittee, called a meeting of liber- al and moderate Democratic Congressmen last Friday. The group planning to "take the gloves off" on the issue of Vietnam. The group considered the possi- bility of joining down the lines on a October 15 in support of the Moratorium by keeping enough people in the hall in order to guarantee a quorum.

The group which is planning activities for the MIT student body will meet tomorrow evening in the East Lounge of the Student Center at 7:30 pm.

Gray is working part-time at the Weather Service, he would "carry their message to the world."

Since 1881