Golfers even season mark with 6½-½ victory over BC

By John Light

The MIT golfers ended their season record at 2-1-2 last Tuesday at the Concord C.C. as they soundly defeated Boston College by a score of 6½ to ½. Solid scoring and good putting in the situation brought about the loopholed score.

Leading the way for Tech once again was Ken Smolek ’70 who maintained his undefeated record with a come-from-behind 1-up victory. Smolek was one down after 16 holes, but managed to win both 17 and 18 to emerge with a victory. Playing at number two was Don Anderson ’70. He trailed by one going into 15, but a hole there and a par on the tough 16th hole gave him a 1-up lead which he held for the last two holes. Another 1-up winner was Bob Armstrong ’70 who sunk a clutch five foot putt on the last hole to win the match.

After a long layoff, Gregg Erickson ’70 came through with a 77 that setted him a one-up victory. After losing an early lead, Erickson and his opponent began trading holes. Only three holes were halved in the seven-match, one of which was the last with Erickson holding on to the lead he had taken on the 17th hole.

Andy Smith ’72 and John Light ’70 had the easiest time for the engineers. Smith won three of the first four holes and went up 4-0. His lead was cut to two by the 13th, but won on the next two holes ended the match with Smith on top 4-3.

Light rocketed to a five up lead after the first nine. He lost 10, 11 and 12; but won 11 and 12; and on 13 gave him an easy 6-3 victory.

The only MIT golfer without a win was Mark Davies ’72, who tied his opponent.

The golfers wind up the fall season next week when they take on Clark, Brandeis, and Stonehill.

Nixon’s foot in mouth

Next there is the matter of the Green Beret killing of the Vietnamese double agent. Very little is known about the actual facts of the matter, but what is known clearly indicates that Nixon personally ordered the dismissal of charges against the agent, hoping in this fashion to cover up what surely would have exposed a serious and dangerous blunder.

The purpose behind the timing of the November Action is to build on consciousness developed by the Moratorium. While the coalition supports the Moratorium just as it does any anti-war action, its members feel that the end is not yet. Their viewpoint is that America’s imperialism is the cause of the war and Third World repression, must end.

Amara sees November Action as the first step of a movement aimed at ending American Imperialism. The Movement Amara describes with the present coalition as its vanguard, would be seeking a revolution. Their immediate aim is to educate the people into a “democratic consciousness.” The way the Movement plans to accomplish this is through canvassing, teach-ins, and the example of their own actions.

NOVEMBER ACTION HITS IMPERIALISM

In conclusion, the only way to stop this is to fight back. Mr. Nixon must not have a moment’s doubt to play King and prosecute the war against the American public who simply have faith in him, that he’s doing the right thing and is only thinking and making the decisions for all of us, and we need not concern ourselves with matters of politics.

Message for youth

(Continued from page 12) plane with a sticker “End the War Now” and another “We Support Nixon,” a skywriter and on substance: “Dear American Soldier,” “What’s it say?” “It says, American system keep on rollin’. But they never been no start of the war.” For the First Amendment, he is not also Jewish.

It seemed that the continued horror stories of the war were creating the continuous beating of political information on the consciousness had induced a real freakish love-in in the park. If you faced the real truth of what Zian and Canepo were saying as they lashed the US, really faced it (not just yeah, man, isn’t it terrible), you could only cry, or shout aloud, or rebel, or laugh, and be joyous; and most people prefer the latter.

I witnessed the event in the last days before the event it became almost a matter of “Everyone is going” — the event—the numbers, the posters. To arrive almost came to trans- cend the issues. Yet, Richard Nixon should make no mistake when he considers what he has seen through the distortion eyes of the media, which always dwell more on appearance than on substance: there people will never be effectual in changing the American system continues to do as it has been allowed, it is settled, the American public should simply have faith in him, that he’s doing the right thing and is only thinking and making the decisions for all of us, and we need not concern ourselves with matters of politics.

Get involved

Something is happening on the campuses of this nation. It is here that the first serious efforts are being made to grapple with the problems that society must solve if we are to survive the next decade and build a decent society.

The issues at stake here are the problem of the Vietnam War, the problem that has a direct and significant effect on the survival of our society. The young must not ignore it. If you have been looking for a way to find out what is happening and understand the changes going on about you, consider the Tech.

The Tech’s staff not only knows what is going on; they know why things happen and what things are happening. There are many people who want to talk about. Joining any one of our staffs puts you in the middle of what is happening on campus and makes you part of a publication you can be proud of. Nothing quite matches the feeling of seeing your efforts on the newsstands every Tuesday and Friday.

There are now openings on all of our staffs. We are seeking now staff members from all classes who are interested in learning journalism and business with a friendly, cohesive group of students who know where it’s at. News reporting and writing, features, entertainment and the arts, advertising, business, layout and production; if you feel you might like to try your hand of any of these, stop in and talk to us next Tuesday evening.

Come and find out what we’re about: Tuesday, 7:30 pm, in our 4th floor Student Center offices
