Report stresses housing, minority aid programs

4) That the efforts to aid members of minority groups in obtaining an MIT education be endorsed, and that they be recognized as only a beginning.
5) That the housing program be elevated to the status of the Institute’s building program.
6) That efforts be made to improve the Institute’s undergraduate counseling program.
7) That those administrative personnel responsible for the food service on campus press for the development of greater responsiveness and moreimaginative handling of both common and a la carte food service.

In addition, the possible advantages of competition among two food contractors on campus should be carefully weighted.

NELSON CALLS FOR RENT CEILING LAWS

The committee’s report goes on to summarize the discussion of various topics during its meetings. The main areas of interest were student-administrative-trustees communication, undergraduate counseling, social issues, housing, and food. Attention was paid to the report to views of students which were in many cases critical of the existing situations.

The final comments by the committee chairman, Gregory Smith, suggest that if the future, the committee seek out student opinions before its meetings so that a more formal agenda can be drawn up. He also notes that, “the students do look upon the Corporation as a group far, far away without any real contact with the pulse of the students. They, I am sure, regret that; they doubt our credibility as a result and they would like to change.” Smith concludes with the thought that the students in this area should be harbingers of change, not despair, for they express a deep, sincere desire for inclusion in—and cooperation with—the entire university.

Seniors prepare letter censuring Vietnam War

The Class of 1970 announced that it will begin soliciting signatures this week for a letter of the members of its class for a letter which is being sent to President Nixon.

The letter focuses on the War in Vietnam, citing the disillusionment and divisions that it is causing in our society. The letter urges a prompt withdrawal of our troops and an immediate recording of our nation’s priorities.
