Last Summer—Two views

By Emanuel Goldman

With a genuine feeling for the plot of the play, Last Summer, at the Astor Theatre, presents the magic and the horror that four vivid adolescents live through one summer.

Three of them, Sandy, Peter and Dan come upon a lovely girl pondering what to do about a dying seagull that she has punished it, in the woods. The remainder of the story is directed towards completing the parallel.

The gull gains increasing freedom, the gull to fly again. As the seagull develops in parallel to her, she has punished it, in the woods offshore. The remainder of the story is directed towards completing the parallel.
