Who's afraid of Agnew?

By Michael Mehroop

March 10, 1969

The New York Times

Why are we fighting this war?

The answer is that we are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?

We are fighting this war because we think it's worth fighting.

What about the rest of the world? Are they fighting this war?

They are fighting this war because they think it's worth fighting.

What about the United States? Are we fighting this war?