Selective Service offices to combine under Brown
By Bruce Weber

The Undergraduate Selective Service Office will be closed at the end of this school year, it was learned from sources at the Institute.

By June the office will be combined with the Graduate Selective Service Office under Sanborn Brown, Associate Dean of the Graduate School. Miss Brown, currently the Graduate Selective Service Advisor, will take over the duties of advising the undergraduates as well.

The move, brought on by the lottery and expected revisions of the draft, is designed to improve the efficiency of the Selective Service office by centralizing it. This would put the center between the combined offices of two years ago, before the retirement of Mrs. Eleanor Lutz.

According to Irwin Sizer, Dean of the Graduate School, "as long as undergraduates are getting student deferments, the draft is a problem of undergraduate education." It is the opinion, who have to decide whether they wish to continue or not. For the homestay, who need the great

According to Thomas Winship, Editor of the Boston Globe, "Our media--the television, radio, newspaper--are all part of the same media system. The media must take the lead in dramatizing the issues." He stressed the theme of personal influence. "Repeatedly, he said, "we have the world's best minds--physicists, chemists, economists, political scientists--to work on the big issues."

Another interesting point was the importance of viewers in the media. "The more viewers they have, the more powerful they are," Winship said. "The more powerful they are, the more they can affect the media."

Winship added that the media must be "accountable" to their audience. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.

"The Mass Communication' editorial, "As a result of the growing importance of mass media, full attention must be given the problem of the media's role in society. It is a problem that can only be solved through a careful and honest examination of the media's responsibilities and obligations."

The Globe staff concluded that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public. "The media must be accountable to their audience," said Winship. "They must be responsible to their audience, just as any business must be responsible to its stockholders." He ended by saying that the media must be "responsive" to the needs of the public.