By Alex Makowski

Nader discusses need for humane technology

Asking that his audience consider "who is doing what thinking about more humane uses of technology," Ralph Nader addressed the MIT Community yesterday in Kresge.

His remarks preceded an open CAIC meeting called to gather information relevant to "Project on Corporate Responsibility," perceived as needed by Nader to "unplace t6ch-" as well as the "lack of adequate dreaming" of what he called "much innovation can almost be worn thin against the demands of corporate executives busy with regard to "organization and structure.""

Nader warned that "these long-repeated Sunday Supplement fore-

..."Continuous News Service
Since 1881."