riots

militants battle police

2000 rampaging vandals

foot stores, set fires, smash windows stunned police, about 1000 strong, battled more than twice as many demonstrators in the Harvard Square area yesterday afternoon.

Police attempted to curb the violence by declaring unlawful assembly at 4:15 to 6 am for all of Cambridge. The declaration was made when marchers from the Boston Congress on Racial Equality overturned cars and smashed store-fronts.

A large throng of demonstrators surged into the Harvard Square area. A large throng of demonstrators surged into the Harvard Square area.

Police have repeatedly stated that the Administration had ordered the police to avoid arrest, and any reaction to the police in the area. The police have repeatedly stated that the Administration had ordered the police to avoid arrest, and any reaction to the police in the area.

The pattern to these last lootings was repeated for all who lived in the area. Rampaging demonstrators smashed car windows, smashed store-fronts.

The pattern to these last lootings was repeated for all who lived in the area. Rampaging demonstrators smashed car windows, smashed store-fronts.

The pattern to these last lootings was repeated for all who lived in the area. Rampaging demonstrators smashed car windows, smashed store-fronts.

The pattern to these last lootings was repeated for all who lived in the area. Rampaging demonstrators smashed car windows, smashed store-fronts.

The pattern to these last lootings was repeated for all who lived in the area. Rampaging demonstrators smashed car windows, smashed store-fronts. 