MacGregor stalled; phones still missing

By Bruce Peetz

Several years ago the campus housing service forecast that “MacGregor House will be completely and readily for use by fall, 1968.” MacGregor is certainly open, but whether or not it is ready for use is a topic of lively discussion for the hapless students now living there.

No chimneys

MacGregor is a fine place to live without disturbance from professors, activities, friends or girls. For the two to five weeks until dorm lines areput in, MacGregor residents will be completely isolated. The extensions and payphones will be longer in coming than the original chimney, the room adjoining theirs is too small to git into with a chimney through the rooms above. Since a single becomes especially chummy for the suite. the Springfield Oval. It is a path-finding institution.
