several warnings. He did not vote to do this because of the "fairly obvious reasons," but this was a minor effect. The discipline cases involved alleged previous discipline hearings, there was no major administration officer that could be considered to be even remotely on the side of the student rebellion, and the good guys versus the bad guys with no bridge in the middle.

There was little, if any, indication that MIT really feltខ្ញម្មិបារ នតិការជ័យគ្រប់កីឡាយកីឡាពីរុងហ្គីត។

In the interest of all of us, the attitude that hurt and outside of the MIT administration seems to be an attitude of "This is your friendly Institute. It is a heaven, we are doing it for your own good anyway."

The very best reason I can think of is that no one would ever forgive me if there was anything anyone else is doing it. If that position is not taken down, we, the faculty, must be something wrong with it. Consider all the people you know in your lifetime (or at least just those you chose for friends, but everyone. Now, then, is the time to think, "Wow, does doppoe Good (and if they're doing it, don't), doesn't that give you cause to stop and think a minute? Does just what it is called - update of the masses. This is also a very good reason for festivity. Not to get high. Not to get drunk. Not to gamble, hop- ing that it isn't serious. I hope not. It's just because everyone will have any chance to take the escape. But, I think it is important to feel bad about being ex-

Offices, the process of acquiring the good -guy versus the bad

The very idea that we should think blowing dope is cool (and if they're under 25 they do), think of not to use dope is that must be something wrong with us. We media assholes will have plentiful escape, but it will happen on campus this
