more fair.

Trust

We sometimes have a difficulty with this trusting part.
I'm not saying blind faith or trust is appropriate. It has to be trust that is challenged and monitored. It's a matter of people listening to the evidence, pres-tended according to a set of procedures, and making a judgement. I just don't think there's ever going to be a better way.

Several members of the Scranton Commission on Canpy Unrest have been invited to MIT to participate in a Compton Seminar on October 19.

The topic of the seminar is to be the nature of the modern academic community, according to Jim Tsang, who is organizing the seminar. In particular, he hopes the discussion will focus on the specific nature of MIT, both as a large urban university, and as a technological institute emphasizing research.

In a time when MIT is assessing its educational policy via a special commission, T and feels it appropriate to consider a meeting to discuss MIT's proposition concerning the disposition of two blocks of low-rent residential property. It allegedly owns in Cambridge is being sponsored by the University Action Group for more than day in room 1-390.

Mr. Antony Horsey, the Institute Real Estate Officer, will reportedly be present to explain the Institute's position.

Interested students, faculty or staff members as well residents of the area are invited.
