Riflemen rebreak record

The varsity riflemen, fresh from their March title from the McCormick College last Saturday, in which they set a new MIT record of 1352, were expected to do the same thing yesterday, when the team faced the Western Baptist State. The MIT shooters broke the all-time MIT record, which they had set only four days before, with a fantastic 1366.

Leading the team were two seniors, Eric Kresner and Captain Karl Lomson, who both fired excellent scores of 277, only 5 points below the all-time MIT individual record. Bill Swedish, another senior, was the third man on the team, as he produced a fine 273.

The Schell Regatta, one of the New England Freshman Sailing championships, is annually one of the biggest events on the New England sailing scene. Each school in New England and several visitors from other intercollegiate districts are invited to participate. Entry in the regatta is limited to schools which have won trophies or other major regattas, thus making the event a rather select and elite group of teams. The regatta took place on the banks of Lake Michigan, and was the final contest of the year for the MIT sailing team.

A major topic of the Athletic Association meeting yesterday was the possibility of a women's sailing team, and to give the women the same status as the men. This new proposal was a direct result of the women's demand for the same rights as their male counterparts.

Dr. J. Thompson, head of the athletic department, and Professor Smith agreed that there should be a women's athletic association. What was important was that the women's team should be just as good as the men's.

Sophomore Tom Milbury was another key man as he turned in a 97 in the prone position, 91 in kneeling, and 82 standing.

Manager Howie Klein '72 rounded out the riflemen's attack with a 266, made up of a 96 prone, 88 kneeling, and 84 standing.

The team had good depth in several shooters, among whom were Frank Keil, Tom Milbury, and Karl Lomson.

The Sorry, but we have decided, and I understood that it would be a good idea to bring up this proposal in the fall. When I spoke to him, however, he said that we did want a letter sweater rather than a charm: fencing, crew, cheerleading, and field hockey teams as long as it wasn't the same as the men's award.

That evening will be the celebration of the MIT sailing team, rounding out the top half of the six school field.

Sailors third in Schell

The Prudential Trophy Regatta, held at the Taffy Yacht Club at Upper Mystic Lake, was sailed in a variety of wind conditions. Four of the fourteen school present were eliminated in a six boat series sailed in heavy wind on Saturday. The ten schools which made the cut sailed two races on Saturday and seven on Sunday to determine the winner of the trophy.

Each school in New England is eligible to enter one skipper to compete for the trophy. Seven Cucumbers, sailing with Arnold Nunez and Randy Young as crew, represented the MIT men's team, and placed third in the four boat fleet.

The varsity sailing team placed second in the regatta at the Coast Guard Academy, and finished in first place. Keil put on a particularly strong performance, winning almost all the races in his division.

In a regatta at Coast Guard on Sunday, MIT placed second behind the Coast Guard squad. Sandy Warrick, sailing with John Davis '72 as crew, and Eric Darling, with Bob Hart, were each second in their respective divisions, finishing one point behind the Coast Guard skippers.

The Harvard placed third in the regatta, rounding out the top half of the six school field.
