Browning explains rent rise

(Continued from page 1) these deficits were to be paid off, both housing and dining services. There was still just presentations on next year's room and board. Browning had also predicted further increases in both room and board next year, and in years to come.

Browning said that cost-increase proposals for next year's room and board rates, termed "the Rape of the West" by some, had been presented to the Academic Council, and were approved by both President Howard Johnson and the FAVOR President Jerome Wiesner. The increases are still subject to revision and change, but elements of them appear to be a virtual certainty, notably the across-the-board increases in room and board next year, and in years to come.

As previously noted, the operation of the House desk is being trimmed to only 8 hours per day. This was a central bone of contention at the meeting, as several desk staff members were present. Said one, "If it weren't for the desk staff, this House wouldn't have opened in September." He was referring to the fact that at the start of the school year, MacGregor was not ready for complete occupancy, and only the hard work of the desk staff was able to sort things out during several crises.

At one point during the meeting, the blackboard that Browning was using to explain the figures related to the increase was taken away by students who said they needed it for a 6.14 class. Browning inquired if there wasn't another blackboard in the House that he could use, reflecting that with the money from the House Tax and the income from the laundry, the House should have sufficient funds to purchase a second blackboard.

Explained one of the students, Paul Aikin '71, as he was curtailing the blackboard, "We spent the money to finish the House, Ken."
