A Minor freakout! See page 2
Constitutional breakdown at the very end. See page 4
Students grade teachers. See page 7
VOLUME 91, NUMBER 24
FRIDAY, MAY 7, 1971
MIT, CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
FIVE CENTS

Stalemate at Gov't Center

By Joe Kash and Peter Pecenky

Across the street from the Federal Building in Government Center was severely restricted Thursday when a number of students and demonstrators sat-in non-violently behind barricades in front of the buildings and on Cambridge Street.

Ward noted that although the trains are presently using gasoline engines, a changeover to electric turbines is expected soon.

Stalemate at Gov't Center

By Joe Kash and Peter Pecenky

Across the street from the Federal Building in Government Center was severely restricted Thursday when a number of students and demonstrators sat-in non-violently behind barricades in front of the buildings and on Cambridge Street.

Ward noted that although the trains are presently using gasoline engines, a changeover to electric turbines is expected soon.

Stalemate at Gov't Center

By Joe Kash and Peter Pecenky

Across the street from the Federal Building in Government Center was severely restricted Thursday when a number of students and demonstrators sat-in non-violently behind barricades in front of the buildings and on Cambridge Street.

Ward noted that although the trains are presently using gasoline engines, a changeover to electric turbines is expected soon.

Stalemate at Gov't Center

By Joe Kash and Peter Pecenky

Across the street from the Federal Building in Government Center was severely restricted Thursday when a number of students and demonstrators sat-in non-violently behind barricades in front of the buildings and on Cambridge Street.

Ward noted that although the trains are presently using gasoline engines, a changeover to electric turbines is expected soon.