phone directory, accurate to last October. After composing a copy at still another desk, she began filling out a small green card, satisfied, I assumed.

From the card I discovered I belonged to ward 5, precinct 2.1 also supplied a birthday (the draft card did nicely) and an occupation.

Now some of the information was transcribed to a huge, bound "Register of Voters"; in addition I supplied (without proof) a place of birth and an employer.

I sensed (with some trepidation) I assumed.

bers have worried about the graduation's relevance in a day when whiteness and even fraternities are considered anachronisms. There is a certain self-conscious embarrassment displayed by the partici-pantes, and this serves to weaken the onestrong rules, "We part in the name of Osiris is about the nature of the ritual. Osiris is supposed to be a secret, but it's rather as open one these days. Furthermore, members aren't supported to talk about what goes on in meetings, but this account of recent events follows several long tundis Osiris.

Most of the members don't think this was the case historically, however. The trend has been in recent years toward a more open forum, and somehow it seems more comes along, most consider Osiris a valuable means of keeping communication going between the three main groups in academic. MIT Besides, these dinners are rather enjoyable affairs, with songs and dances into Osiris cannot be estimated, but it probably shouldn't be underestimated, either.
