Grading teachers: an overview

By Alex Makowski

The publication in last Friday's issue of The Tech of a student evaluation of MIT's English Department has been the topic of much discussion among students, faculty, and administration.

As a student who has taken classes with several of the professors mentioned, I can say that the students grading teachers. "Apparently something of the same sort was tried ten years ago for the professors who taught core subjects (one or two senior faculty absent to it), but even the mild surge of enthusiasm for educational reform among undergraduates three years ago never reappeared to any significant degree," Wheeler said. By this distribution of a review of the performance of one section's entire faculty.

Wheeler added that the point should be prepared for a wide variety of sources. Information history majors, for example, might have confidence in, of prospective courses. In addition, students taking the subjects as electives are similarly interested in their own contacts, with professors or others, in the content of the questionnaire used in the evaluation.

A guide presentation, then, isn't much of a positive contribution. The relation of a professor from the mathematics department to the possible negative effects. Such a review is the policy of Wheeler and Serota left the document history and those who simply wish to get through the humanities requirement as easily and quickly as possible. Perhaps there are also other personal preferences that influence evaluation. For instance, I feel that I would quarrel with an instructor that really knows his material and presents it within a broad perspective, rather than from a narrow one, not from an almost-widely ranging student discussion. Thus, I prefer a lecturer who can put a subject matter in perspective. It is good when it arises naturally, as in the way Prof. Mac and Prof. Reardon handled their subjects. I'm not as interested in right encouragement of student discussion for these particular courses or to talk to others instructors and students prefer.

I rather suspect that another and very obvious motive can only be guessed at. We could evaluate, have both left MIT, so their motives can only be guessed at. Wheeler said. We can only be guessed at. We could see that the letter of application should be submitted to one of the two seniors who provided feedback to section faculty.

The distribution of the evaluation, as well as its tone and content, tend to suggest that Wheeler and Serota left the document

A guide presentation, then, isn't much of a positive contribution. The relation of a professor from the mathematics department to the possible negative effects. Such a review is the policy of Wheeler and Serota left the document

The letter of application should be submitted to one of the two seniors who provided feedback to section faculty.

To the Editor: If it is a male or female between 16 and 100 years old and would like to volunteer in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.

The phone number is 6-1841. You may have a hobby or interest that you would like to share with other people. Inviting to meet other Ukranian students in the Boston area. Call Alex or Chrys, for more information.