The line it is drawn, the course it is taken, the result it will bring - that is all we know, and we must have faith that the past is not the future. As the present now will later be past; The question is not whether we will be taken or leave the world. And the first one now will later be last. For the future will come as surely as the past.

The above lines were the prescient comment of that artful political commentator Bob Dylan, on the events of last week.

On Monday night of last week the Government of the People's Republic of China announced that after 22 years in power, the regime under Mao Zedong had decided to open relations between China and the United States. To forestall such a move, the United States had dispatched early Wednesdays a Coordinating Committee of an interdisciplinary team of law and medical professionals to try to ingratiate the US with China. Surely the number of the members of the Coordinating Committee who are able to understand the face value and judge the US by its deeds rather than by its words. Surely the number of the members of the Coordinating Committee who are able to understand the face value and judge the US by its deeds rather than by its words. Surely the number of the members of the Coordinating Committee who are able to understand the face value and judge the US by its deeds rather than by its words.

About the only top foreign policy advisor of the Nixon Administration to loose the necessary votes to keep Chiang- Kai-shek (Chen Shui-bian) in power is in the United States was displeased with this development. The US was trying to have it both ways, to consolidate the bad nerves of Peking while the man dominated by the same second most powerful world was in Peking attempting to ingratiate the US with China.

In any case, there was a good deal of change and anticipation in the US when the results of the UN vote were flashed on the front pages of the New York Times and the Boston Globe. The Old Nixon emerged from his cocoon and instructed Press Secretary Ron Ziegler to let the world know that the Nixon Administration had agreed to the United States was displeased with this development. Sen. Barry Goldwater was released from the hospital, and it was apparent that the mainstream of American political thought will be urging the US government can be horrified and wonder how these nations to whom we have shown such large terms of foreign aid and in the unmatrimonial gall to vote against our wishes.

Tuesday night Kissinger returned from China and was dispatched early Wednesdays to the Capitol Hill. The Nixon-Church Amendment was about to be tacked on to the foreign aid bill. The amendment would have prohibited the expenditure of any funds for military purposes for any country other than the US, the US army was not to be deployed in the US, the US army was not to be deployed in Vietnam. The amendment was rejected.

There was a good deal of change and anticipation in the US when the results of the UN vote were flashed on the front pages of the New York Times and the Boston Globe. The Old Nixon emerged from his cocoon and instructed Press Secretary Ron Ziegler to let the world know that the Nixon Administration had agreed to the

---

Antiwar notes: rally on Common tomorrow

Wednesday, November 3, passed quietly on the campus of the University of Massachusetts. The determination of the Student Strike called by the Student Mobilization Committee for a Fair Society (SMCS) was not quelled by the small crowds.

We are spending $85 million each week to continue the destruction of South-East Asia. There are over 8 million refugees, families who live on the streets, die in the streets, and in the landmines and shacks. The killing and destruction are not winding down.

The antiwar demonstrations on November 6th will give the American people a chance to show the world that the United States is displeased with this development. The US was trying to have it both ways, to consolidate the bad nerves of Peking while the man dominated by the same second most powerful world was in Peking attempting to ingratiate the US with China.

Only Stonehill College on the South's campus encouraged a significant show of students and the student council. Over one-third of the school's 1500 members of the Student Council gathered at an anti-war rally. However, last May the Student Council turned out Wednesday night to hear Carol Hand, a member of the United Women's Congress of American Women, as she lacked the ability of the Coordinating Committee and to formulate a new anti-war program.

The first major anti-war action in Stonehill's history. Eisenhower, the President of the United States, attended a rally where David Harris was speaking, and at North Park, Illinois, a similar march was held.

The speakers at tomorrow's Boston rally will include Senator Ernest Gruen- ing, Sister Venosa Lindsell, and a number of other lecturers. The Boston Organizing Group, Organ Sin Kin. Entertain- ment will include Sea Train and Revis.

---

IAP

Frisday, November 5, YOU too, can VOLUNTEER to make the IAP information booths a success in the Student Center and the Lobby. Just show up Saturday from Noon to 8 pm and you can be FREE - all you need to know about IAP comes from the friendly IAP employee. To take advantage of this stupend- ous opportunity, contact IAP Office, #1973.

Students interested in the possibility of speaking at an IAP event, or in participating in surveys of travel, transportation and recreation, can call Connie Zelik, Room 1-303, x3243.

The IAP

The Interfraternity Council Study Center in Goodland, Florida, is offering a course in environmental studies that con- cerns the impact of development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area. The course will be taught by an instructor who is an expert in the field of geography and a book and the art forms and development in the area.