Valda Maeda...

...in which she describes her correspondence and committee trials experiences. Her comments are well worth reading, as they reflect the sentiments of many others, and they shed light on the management of the school board. Maeda is a strong advocate for better communication between parents and teachers, and she believes that more time should be devoted to this issue. She also comments on the importance of student voice in decision-making, and she encourages teachers to listen to their students' concerns.

She goes on to discuss the role of the principal and the school board in maintaining a healthy learning environment. She feels that principals should be more accessible to students and parents, and that they should work to create a culture of respect and trust. Maeda also comments on the importance of funding, and she encourages the community to support its schools.

In conclusion, Maeda's article is a valuable contribution to the ongoing conversation about education in our community. It is a call to action for all of us to work together to create a better learning environment for our students. We must listen to the voices of our students, teachers, and parents, and we must be willing to make the changes necessary to ensure that every student has the opportunity to succeed.
