Where were they last year?

By Walter T. Middletuck

By all means, the MIT campus should at least be aware of the activities of the current Undergraduate Association. The 1971-72 Association will be under a new leadership. This leadership could be in the percentage of Larry Dagen, Larry Eisenberg, or Curtis Reeves, or maybe even both of them.

From their platform statements it's quite evident that all the candidates feel very strongly about some things. Their issues are all primarily one and the same. Each feels that the U.A. is becoming, if it hasn't already become, a defunct organization. They all feel that dorms fees are too high. They all feel that the administration is too close to the student body, U.A. and faculty and the administration have been severed. They all feel that the budget is an issue and many of them are over budgeted and how the administration is. According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?

According to the candidates, student apathy is on the rise, although the idea of a student movement is hotly debated. Why is it that the student body is not acting more as a whole?