Winter is the most active sports season of the year at MIT, and as such combines many themes. (From above, clockwise: The brutality of hockey: two UConn players crush Bob Hunter '73 between them. Rebounds is the name of the game in basketball, and fighting for them was the major chore of Bill Godfrey '72 and Jerry Hudson '73. Paul Mitchell '72 marks the individual combat characteristic of wrestling, as he effectively controls the man beneath him. Precision is the byword of pistol squad members Ted Ruegsegger '72, Bob Gibson '72, John Stetkar '73 and John Good '72. Teamwork is evidenced in the mile relay by Richard Hester '76 and George Chiesa '74. Finally, no team would be a team without a coach. One of MIT's best and most successful is pistol coach Tom McClennen.

Photos by Dave Tenenbaum, Neal Richtand and Brad Billardbaux.