SOFTWARE DEVELOPMENT

If you spent weekends and holidays in the Computer Room, it's finally going to pay off for you.

In both cash and opportunity.

National CSS is an aggressive, dynamic computer time-sharing company that's already established an outstanding record in a super-competitive business. At 3 years of age, we've a $10 million company with the world's largest commercial time-sharing system, 2,000 customers and offices across the U.S. Plus an opportunity for the talented Programmer that's limited only by imagination and ability.

We don't hire Trainees at this stage, so if you are a professional to start and put you to work immediately using our IBM logical trinity (three 360/67's on-line) on sophisticated and diversified software development projects.

Your major could be in any relevant discipline and you don't need a time-sharing background. But you must be competent in computer technology and in the use of System/360 and have programming experience in at least two System/360 languages.

That's why the job can command $12,000 to start (plus excellent fringes).

To find out more about our company and what you can do here, please send your resume to Personnel Director, Dept. MIT

NATIONAL CSS, INC.
An equal opportunity employer (m/f) with new ideas in computers.

SAILORS TAKE TUFTS; PLACE FOURTH IN OWEN

MIT's varsity sailing squad opened its season Saturday and Sunday with competition in the Owen Trophy Regatta and a regatta at Tufts. The mariners came away with a three-point victory over host school Tufts on Sunday, and a fourth place finish in the Owen, emblematic of the Eastern Old Guard Championship.

A strong performance late in the regatta almost gave the Tech sailors a second place in the Owen, but a questionable foul in the last race dropped them to fourth. Alan Spoon '73, with Dean Krom '73 cruising, finished strong to win the last two races in A-Division, take Larry Becow '74 and Steve Cauchiaro '74 co-skippers in Division B, with Bob Lorigan '73 as crew, would have clinched low point honors if not for the disqualification.

The regatta, sailed at the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Connecticut, was won by the Naval Academy, followed by Yale and the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy. The final results were: Navy 76, Yale 87, Merchant Marine 92, MIT 97, Harvard 119, Coast Guard 124, Princeton 131, Brown 132.

The caliber of the competition was high, with several of the schools present ranked in the top ten nationally. Consistent sailing gave MIT a first place in a regatta sailed at Tufts in puffly, shifty winds on Sunday. In A-Division, Frank Keil '73, with Richard Zippell '74 co-skips, placed third, while Walter Frank '74 (with a first and a second) and Frank Miller '72 co-skipped MIT's "B" entry to first place divisional honors.

Tech's total score of twenty-one points topped the third-placed Thet, followed by Tufts 24, Babson 28, Boston State 29, Boston University 38, Yale 41, and Northeastern 53.

General sailing at the MIT Sailing Pavilion opened yesterday for members of the MIT Community with current MIT A.S. A. membership cards. The cards may be purchased in room 110-C on Monday and Thursday evenings at the Pavilion.
