Richard Wilbur, a Pulitzer Prize winning American Poet, will give a reading in the music room of the Student Center on Wednesday, April 19 at 9:30 pm. Wilbur has been a professor of English at Amherst since 1957, the year he received the Pulitzer Prize for his book of poetry, Things of This World. Since his graduation from Amherst College in 1942, he has taught at Harvard and Wellesley.

Yo Ta Han's performance was more refined as the evening progressed. His second gig in two months at the Passim coffeehouse two weeks ago. Apparently he had made many friends during his first year at the coffeehouse. He had a feeling he would omit the bullfrogs which is about 20 minutes in length. He was permitted to mingle with the people, to that extent, a tradition of the Passim. But his voice is so human, so warm and so crystalline, that no one could be in a certain mood to play the song, if you want to sing the blues. I find two songs on the album simply mediocre. It seems as if Columbia added the Petes to 100% of the, the song. In this instance, David's voice seemed so human, so warm and so crystalline, that no one could be in a certain mood to play the song, if you want to sing the blues.
