Extra

By Storm Kasman

The University Invited Friday's special meeting, voted to pursue a policy of flexibility in dealing with the demands of a generation of students who are questioning the role of the university in the present conflict in Vietnam.

Two more motions were passed at this meeting. The first motion was made by Hartley Rogers, Chairman of the Employee Caucus, and was called for the purpose of establishing a system of employee-student meetings. The other motion was made by David Tenenbaum of the Faculty Senate, and it was called for the purpose of establishing a system of employee-student meetings.

The faculty meeting began officially at about 3:45. A resolution, offered by students, which sought a change in the use of pass/fail grading, was rejected. The resolution called for the elimination of the pass/fail system and the adoption of a more rigorous system of evaluation. The resolution was supported by a majority of the faculty, but it was passed by a very close vote.

The meeting was held in Building 20 on the Massachusetts Institute of Technology campus. It was announced that the meeting would be held in the auditorium of the Department of Biology, beginning at 4:30 p.m. on Wednesday, May 17, and that the meeting would be open to the public.

The meeting was attended by approximately 650 people, including students, faculty members, and members of the administration. It was reported that the meeting was well attended, with a large number of people in attendance.

The meeting was called to order by the President of the University, who introduced the first speaker, Professor John Wyne, President of the Institute.

Professor Wyne stated that the meeting had been called to discuss a number of issues, including the question of the use of pass/fail grading, and that the meeting would be open to the public.

At 4:30 p.m., the meeting began. The first speaker, Professor Wyne, announced that the meeting would be held in the auditorium of the Department of Biology. The meeting was called to order by the President of the University, who introduced the first speaker, Professor John Wyne, President of the Institute.

Professor Wyne stated that the meeting had been called to discuss a number of issues, including the question of the use of pass/fail grading, and that the meeting would be open to the public.

At 4:30 p.m., the meeting began. The first speaker, Professor Wyne, announced that the meeting would be held in the auditorium of the Department of Biology. The meeting was called to order by the President of the University, who introduced the first speaker, Professor John Wyne, President of the Institute.