Technology, Power and Value

Several humanities faculties and student associations will be offering events at MIT during the month of March to engage in the discussion of the role of technology in society and the impact of technology on culture and identity. These events include lectures, workshops, and panel discussions.

I.C.F. meeting reveals apathy

The IFC will be holding meetings of fraternity house officers on the evening of Sunday, September 26. The meeting will largely be determined by attendance. House treasurers will meet at the DKE house. The primary topic will be the collection of large debts from fraternity brothers. House managers will meet at TC to discuss negotiation of the sign system. The Phy house, where house maintenance costs are stored and sold, will also be on the agenda.

Student center signs improve directions

By Charlotte Cooper

Colorful new signs and directories are in the Student Center are the product of the Student Center Committee funds and the design efforts of Dave Brown, a veteran of the Student Center Committee, and 1971 graduate of MIT's Architecture Department.

Architectural Sign, Inc. of Beverly, Massachusetts, designed and built the signs. The signs consist of a 42-foot-long cabinet kitchen, bus lines, and longitude and latitude lines in Helvetica Medium typefaces — chosen because of the signs' legibility — on the back of a sheet of mylar, which was then cut into pieces for easy installation. The decision was made because the signs were to be installed in projects generated by students.

The MIT Women's Committee is in the process of designing computer graphics and computer applications, and will consider five possible signs for the Student Center.
