Parvey inaugurated as Lutheran Chaplain

The new Lutheran Chaplain for MIT, Constance Farn Parvey, is the fifth woman to be ordained in the Lutheran Church. The service of installation took place Sunday in the MIT chapel. Parvey was the first person to be ordained at Harvard University's Memorial Church. She will serve as associate pastor at the University Lutheran Church and as Lutheran Chaplain at MIT and Harvard.

The Reverend John Crocker of the Episcopal Church and the Reverend Stanley F. Maclevia of the Roman Catholic Church participated in the service on Sunday. Professor Robert Halfman welcomed Parvey into her ministry at MIT. She comes to MIT to fill the position of Lutheran Chaplain left open a year ago when the Reverend Don Lee died.

"I would like my work to serve the aesthetic, the spiritual and the ethical dimensions of the community as a balance to the rational and analytic side which is the work of the Institute," said Parvey. She hopes to develop responsible leadership and serve as a presence that is a bridge between the past and the future at MIT, which is future oriented.

Between 1953 and 1966, she served in the university ministry to students at Duke University in Durham, N.C., the Lutheran Ministry in Greater Boston, the University of California at Los Angeles and the University of Wisconsin, Madison.

Parvey has published several articles since 1966 and has been mainly engaged in research and writing until now. She has been executive producer of the Town Meeting television series in Minneapolis-St. Paul, editor of the Harvard Divinity Bulletin, on the staff of the McCarthy for President campaign, and a member of the Department of the Church of the Harvard Divinity School working on the role of volunteers in the Third World Development.

Parvey will have an office at 312 Memorial Drive. She plans to divide her time 40-40-20 between MIT, Harvard, and the University Church in Cambridge.

DNC chooses Strauss to succeed Westwood

By Norman D. Sandler

WASHINGTON (December 9) - Texas Attorney General Robert Strauss was elected today to replace Mrs. Jean Westwood as chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

In a close vote, Strauss won a majority by only a three-vote margin, shortly after Mrs. Westwood announced her pro-

We refer to the party's national convention in Miami Beach where the Democratic National Committee was re-elected.

The Strauss people then fought hard with the more conservative members of the Commitee in attempting to pass the proposed 50 percent and the Westwood forces were supporters of other "candidates" and "candidates" who were long-reaching and not limited to those who visited Friday.

After the conference, MIT students took part in a half dozen girls on general tours of the campus. They were expressed a preferential interest in some area, and how the potential community as a balance to those who visited Friday.

Callahan '75 led one of the engineering tours. She told The Tech that the tour met all the usual admissions office notices, minus the standard print, spirit and impersonal learning factory. The guides also encouraged the girls to apply to MIT if they had not already done so.

The Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) stated on Friday that it intended to cancel domestic youth and family discount fares.

According to a report in the New York Times, the special rates on family and confirmed rates for children under 2 are being cancelled at "the earliest possible time" after it is determined the potential savings can be applied to lower airline fares in general. When standby youth fares will be discontinued has not yet been decided.

The reason for the costs of three to two decision, the CAB noted that such discounts discriminate against the general travelling public. He also pointed out that while designed to tap new markets by luring travellers who might not normally fly, "total traffic generated is only minimally larger" than it would be if the fares were cut across the board.

The discount plans

There are three special fare plans which are affected. One covers seniors in the twelve-to-

21 age group who pay only 80 percent of the standard day coach fare for a confirmed reservation. The other youth rate will also be eliminated. In this case, youths can wait for seats on a plane that is full on a confirmed basis, and fly at the same time as coach fare.

The second youth rate could mean an increased cost of as much as $20 per flight. The CAB has decided that the West Coast.

It added that the third discount plan, the family rate, the head of the family pays full fare, accompanied by four children - quarters, youths of the family pay half fare, and children under two and eleven fly for half, and children under two are free.

The CAB has also discontinued to cancel the popular Discover America discount for a confirmed reservation within 18 months. Under this plan, any adult can fly at 87.5 percent of the regular fare if the trip lasts at least seven days and the flights are not taken during certain hours of peak traffic. The CAB promised it would make a critical review of the many other discount plans offered by the airlines.

Second time

Three of the CAB considered similar proposals to drop youth fares but was dissuaded by proposed support from the West Coast.
