Season's Greetings:

Once again the Christmas season is upon us, and in keeping with time-honored tradition, The Tech presents its selections of Christmas gifts for various members of the MIT Community.

To Chancellor Gray: A pair of scissors to cut the budget with.

To Professor Richard Douglas: Another pair of scissors, but this time with dull edges, the kind that can't cut people.

To Vice-President Ken Wadsworth: A decision on Singletex, or an answer to the question "Will we fill out a parcel we aren't using?"

To Chi Phi: Co-eds
To Corner Four: Co-eds
To Ken Browning, Dick Sorenson, Walter Milne, and James Chilton: Bigger and better pads to write names in at New Demonstrations.

To New England Telephone: A phone that works, and phone backers that don't.

To Jerry Wiener: Four More

To Vice-President Phil Stoddard: His own copying machine

To Rob Hunter: More and more scores

To Norman Sandler: Great remover

To Ned Vitalie: Knowledge of what to kiss and when to kiss it.

To Peter Polansky: The Tech's Washington Bureau Chief: A great knowledge of etymology.

To David Heath: A self-study procrastino course.

To Curtis Reeves: In recognition of his dedication to the Undergraduate Association, six free lessons in necrophilosophy.

To Constantine B. Simonides: A portfolio.

To Hartley Rogers: A captive audience

To Arthur Matlock: A blackboard that goes up and down.

To Paul Eugene Schnieder: A real newspaper.

To the Board of Volume 93 of The Tech: A pseudo-editor-in-chief

To Larry Goldstein and Frank Pereschi: Any newspaper at all.

To Lee Giguere: A new dictionary and a pooper-scooper

To Steve Lourell: A template of a "j" and a "g".

To John J. Donovan: A spelling book.

To Henry Kinsinger: His own public relations and a centerfold in the latest issue of Life.

To the Coop: A mortgage on the Harvard Crimson.

WTBS notifies police of robbery discovered

(Continued from page 1)

At WTBS, The Tech found out that Johnson had initially taken the call and then referred it to Clark, who was the on-the-air disc jockey. After talking to the listener and not being able to get any more information, Clark called the Campus Patrol because "the police will listen to someone like me." That's probably why the guy called us instead of one of the other stations in this area."

Speaking as the program director of WTBS, a position he has held for the past three months, Clark, who is also known as JayCee, said, "I'm glad that WTBS could play such an important role in this incident. We are trying to create a program schedule that can relate to all communities within the area."

Later contact with the Boston Police informed The Tech that the investigation into this case is being continued and that no other information is available at present.

Mass. auto insurance, explained

Mass. automobile insurance can get a little complicated. And if you're under 25, it can get expensive. We'll simplify things. And we'll help you keep your premiums as low as possible.

W.T. Phelan & Co.
Insurance Agency, Inc.
11 Daughtt St., Harvard Square (next to the Society Center).

Massachusetts, to whose attorney, now in possession of the records, has held for the past three years (and still love it). I'll be happy to help you. 594-3406. (Weston)

The Technology and Culture Seminar and M.I.T. Department of Philosophy present a series of lectures on POLITICAL CONFLICT AND VIEWS OF HUMAN NATURE

DR. ALASDAIR MACINTYRE
Departments of Philosophy & Political Science
Dean of the College of Arts, Norte, B.U.
Tuesdays in 9-150
Jan. 23, 5-15 Politics as Drama.
Jan. 30, 5-15 Politics as Tragedy.
Respondents: Prof. Eitingon, Morison, Humanities
Prof. Haywood R. Aller, Political Science
Miles Morgan, Philosophy and Political Science

...the whole ball of wax is 20% off our usual Coop low prices! THE BEAM SHOP! *Fair trade items not included.