what goods we would try to sell in the new store (given the severe space limitations of the present store and the presence of various merchandise). All in all, there is a certain need for the present store, and it is difficult to imagine an alternative that would serve the present needs and interests of the Coop.

As has been pointed out above, the present store is not a place where you would go to browse or to shop leisurely. It is a place where you go to get something quickly and efficiently. The present store is a place where you go to get something quickly and efficiently.

In the meantime, if you are really in a hurry, you can go to the Coop warehouse, which is located in the basement of the Coop building. The warehouse is open from 8:30 to 5:30. The fact is, though that, as everyone knows, who's been to a "11" store, it's always open and always busy, the expenses of longer hours. As a matter of fact, the "11" store is open Monday through Saturday and is open from 11:00 to 9:00.

One thing more is worth mentioning with regard to the operation of the little store. The present store, although small, is not really small. It is a place where you go to get something quickly and efficiently.
