The New Season, Part III: Since I wrote part III a couple weeks ago, the three networks have begun to announce early casualties, and I had to check the obituary section to see if I wasn't reviewing any shows that no longer exist. Fortunately, most of the cancelations were going to be in part IV, but now they can happily be forgotten. The shows include: Where's Harry?, Love Story, Daisy, and Dennis and Pistachio on NBC; The New Perry Mason, Cagney's Dept. and Roll Out on CBS; and the first show to be dropped, ABC's innie Bob & Ted & Carol & Alice. A host of others now exist only in participant's memory, including two veteran series, The FBI and Cagney & Lacey. In fact, the new season can count only two honest-to-Nielsen winners: Kojak, which finished among the top ten shows, and The Girl With Something Extra, which is holding steady in the twenty-fifth slot.

And then there's lines like "Do I trust him? If he's making an animal walking the earth, put a guarantee on Noah's ark, there wouldn't be an animal walking the earth today." And then there's "hey, I'm saying there's a chance I'm not going to be dead, that I'm still here, and I'm just going to go fishing, right, Frank, right?"

Kojak got off to a late start due to this summer's writers' strike, the show didn't debut until almost a month after the start of the first part, and it's already been a great hit, and it's expected to continue its run even longer. The show is based on the true life of a former intern in a British hospital, Doctor in the House, Witty and sophisticated, this show has a real sense of humor. The main character, Kojak, is a police officer with a unique ability to understand and predict the minds of criminals. The show is set in London, and the characters are portrayed with a combination of wit, intelligence, and humanity. The show has become a cultural phenomenon and a favorite among fans of the genre. The show has been renewed for several seasons, and it continues to draw a large audience, making it one of the most popular shows of its time. The show has been praised for its exceptional performances, writing, and direction, and it has won numerous awards and nominations. The show's success has led to spin-offs and adaptations, and it has become a beloved part of television history. Overall, Kojak is a classic example of well-crafted television, and it has left a lasting impact on the industry and its fans.
