Letters to The Tech

To the editor:

I wonder if you’ve noticed the absence of a certain humorous character from recent Tech columns. His name is Phil Mandel. For those of you who have yet to meet him, he is a microelectronics student at MIT and the head of the popular Tech column “You’re Beautiful.”

Phil is a regular contributor to the Tech and is known for his witty humor and insightful observations on MIT life. He has been a part of the Tech community for several years and has become quite popular among the student body.

Phil is known for his caustic wit and his ability to find humor in the most mundane of situations. He has written on a wide range of topics, from the intricacies of MIT life to the trivialities of everyday occurrences.

Phil’s columns are always a welcome addition to the Tech, and his absence has been noted by many. We hope that Phil will soon return to his column, and we look forward to his next installment.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

P.S. Phil, we miss you too!

Letters to The Tech

To the editor:

I thought you might be interested in a recent article I came across. It was a piece written by a former Tech editor, Mary Jane Schultz. The article was published in the Class of 1976 newsletter.

Mary Jane’s article focused on the importance of women’s rights, particularly in the context of legal and political participation. She emphasized the need for equal representation and equal protection under the law.

Mary Jane’s article was a powerful reminder of the struggles that women have faced and continue to face in the pursuit of equality. Her words serve as a call to action for all of us to continue working towards a future where the rights of women are fully realized.

Thank you for sharing this important piece of work.

Sincerely,
