WASHINGTON, Dec 6. Gerald R. Ford was inaugurated as the 40th President of the United States today. He succeeded Richard M. Nixon in a ceremony attended by thousands of admirers and critics.

Back in the White House, President Ford was busy. He was meeting with his cabinet members, signing decrees, and preparing to face the challenges that lay ahead.

Meanwhile, on the streets of Washington, one could hear the cheers of the crowd as the new President was sworn in. The atmosphere was electric, and people were excited about the possibilities of change.

As Ford entered the White House, he was greeted by a troupe of dignitaries, including Vice-President Nelson Rockefeller and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. The new President was determined to strengthen the country's position on the world stage.

With the inauguration complete, the nation looked forward to the future under the leadership of a new President. The road ahead was uncertain, but one thing was clear: the country was in for an exciting time.