British Airways invites you to camp out. Far out.

All over Europe, in fact. Because it's the nicest, cheapest way there is to see it.

Imagine, for instance, seeing Britain, Holland, France, Italy, Spain, Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Russia, etc. at sampling trip prices.

We have 8 combinations of countries to choose from. But before we tell you where, read about the how. And the whom with.

You go in a bus. A tough little bus that, with equal ease, can barrel down the highways or snake its way through the fascinating back streets you've never seen otherwise. It comes with complete camp gear (except sleeping bags) and it's wired for sound. The better to hear the rock tapes with.

It also comes with a driver who really knows his way around. Knows where the sights are. And where the campsites are, though you live in a tent, they're really little villages in themselves, with hot and cold running everything—shops, restaurants, and discoes.

We'll take good care of you to Britain, Europe. The World.

Ad-hoc grade committee seeks input from public

By Michael Garry

The ad-hoc committee on grades will be holding a public hearing where it plans to discuss ideas on changes in the grading system with interested members of the MIT community, according to Roy F. Sloan, chairman of the committee.

The hearing will be held from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. on Thursday, April 4, in room 37-252.

The framework of ideas the committee plans to discuss, Kaplow asserted, is characterized by "changing the number of grades, plus" grades, and allowing for optional additional comments by students.

In accordance with this concern, Kaplow said, one idea to be discussed is that of dropping F grades from the student transcript. He added, "The transcript is what a positive thing since it indicates what a student has registered and gotten credit for."

Kaplow and other members of the committee continued to discuss whether it is possible to continue to include all grades on the transcript and what the impact would be of dropping the D or adding "plus" grades, and allowing for optional additional comments by students.
