Tennis team dumps Bowdoin; loses to UConn & Harvard

By Ken Davis

MIT's tennis team got off to a rocky start in New England competition, winning only one of its first four matches. The return to New England after a major victory over Bowdoin, 6-3, to take their home opener, but could not handle the University of Connecticut or Harvard.

The squad opened their Northern schedule with a trip to Connecticut last Wednesday, but could not handle the University of Connecticut or Harvard. The Engineers return to action this afternoon at 4:00 in a home match with Coby.

Young and Simpson teamed for the first doubles encounter as winners. MIT's final point came in '74, each contributed a singles number four man, Ted Zouros '74, and the number two man, Lee Simpson '75, and the remainder of the squad mostly sophomores. Needless to say, the 6-3 margin of victory was closer than had been expected.

Young, Simpson, Wally Shjeflo '74, and Jim Datek '77 all came up with singles victories. Young and Phil Yang '76 took the first doubles match, 6-2, 3-6, after reaching set point four times in the first set. Only Datek and Gerard Lum '74, playing third doubles, managed to split sets.
