MIT underclassman and grad students, forming an 'A' team and a 'B' team: Karen Altman '78, Celia Barry '78, Mon-Yu Chai '78, Ross Copperman '78, Nancy Evrard '77, Kim Frances '78, Lisa Jahnke '77, Kyung-Sup Lee '78, Sheila Luster '78, Kathy Menden '77, Alvin Okuna '75, Vonnie Peiser '78, Kathy Renegkamp '77, Judy Stein '78, Yvonne Walsko '74, and Linda Yester '76.

Thus far, three of the season's six matches have already been played, all resulting in victories for the 'A' squad. In the opening match, the 'A' team took the first two games out of three to defeat Lowell Tech.

MIT this year after an abetted attempt was made to organize the team for the first time.

The squad is composed of 16 MIT undergraduates and grad students, forming an 'A' team and a 'B' team: a small number of MIT students plays as well. For example, the 'B' team's lead is 2-1, thus giving the team a slight advantage. The second goal was scored on a penalty kick by Robert Castanon, a graduate student in math, and his assistant Robert Castanon, a graduate student in math, and his assistant MIT's JV soccer team evened its record at 2-2-1 this week with a 3-1 win over Tsung on Tuesday (Steve Tufti '78 put in a penalty kick five minutes from the end). The team has won its first two games out of three, including a 3-0 victory against Lowell Tech on November 12.

While MIT's JV soccer team improved its record to 2-2-1, its first two games out of three, the team's first two games out of three, were victories against Lowell Tech. The team has won its first two games out of three, including a 3-0 victory against Lowell Tech on November 12. The team's first two games out of three were victories against Lowell Tech. The team has won its first two games out of three, including a 3-0 victory against Lowell Tech on November 12.

While MIT's JV soccer team improved its record to 2-2-1, its first two games out of three, were victories against Lowell Tech. The team has won its first two games out of three, including a 3-0 victory against Lowell Tech on November 12. The team's first two games out of three were victories against Lowell Tech. The team has won its first two games out of three, including a 3-0 victory against Lowell Tech on November 12.