Fac hears students on grades proposals

grades, getting rid of pass-fail and adding pluses and minuses to grades would reduce the amount of pressure on a student.

The proposals heard at the faculty meeting, more than the committee's report, seemed to create more bureaucracy which the average MIT student will soon need to find his way around. Student opinions at the meeting reflected this, as the student comments generally tended to find fault with many of the suggestions. The meeting was announced last week by letters to the faculty. However, the U. S. News Section in Monday, which came out the morning of the meeting, gave a prominent position to the announcement of the meeting and probably accounted for the large student turnout (20 of the 100 people) at the faculty meeting.

The student presence was noted enough that President Jerome Weisner, chairing the meeting, at one point invited comments from all the students present, in apparent violation of the rules regulating speaking privileges. Allowed to speak were the student members of the Ad Hoc Committee of CEP, and UAP Steve Wallman '75, who presented questions suggested by the student contingent.

The controversial pass-fail proposals and a possible vote on the committee's report will be taken up again by the faculty at a time certain to decrease student attendance, the regular meeting of December 18, held on the Wednesday of finals week.

For instance. You should know about the opportunities offered by Armed Forces Health Care. As an officer in the service of your choice you'll work in modern facilities with up-to-date equipment. And modern, up-to-date professionals in every area of Health Care.

For example, you should know that Armed Forces Health Care offers opportunities for initial training and advanced study in practically every specialty. Not to mention the opportunity to practice.

You should know, too, that we make it possible for you to pursue a post-residency fellowship at either military or civilian institutions.

And if all this strikes a spark, then you should certainly know about our scholarship program. If you qualify, the tuition for your medical education will be covered fully while you participate in the program. And during that time you'll receive a good monthly stipend.
