In Case of Insomnia — A Conversation

By Storm Kasifman

The Scene: A well-dressed young man comes to the security office where he is to be greeted by a tall, thin individual wearing a conservative gray tweed suit, string tie, and starched white shirt. The young man, Jay Hammer, sprints the revolving door on the left, andsoftly walks down the hall. He sits down, perspiring slightly and looks at the phone. "Mr. Hammer, I am so glad that you finally made it here. I have been trying to get an appointment for over a month."

"Well, Hammer, you know that the work we do here is very important. We are always very busy. It isn't often that I have time to speak with a young man who.."

"Hammer, Mr. Hardcase."

"What?"

"Hammer, the name is Hammer."

"It doesn't matter, Hammer. Your name isn't important to me. Until today you have always been a page of statistics to me. Please do not bring personalities into the matter; it is too disturbing."

"Ah... sorry... ah..."

"Don't waste my time, Hammer. Let's get on with the business. Now, do you have your references?"

"Yes, I have been talking to the state congressmen and other colleagues. A full statement from my accountant. An up-to-date tax return. A list of your affiliations from my bank."

"Good. Now tell me about your experiences and how can we tell if you are an immoral sexual act? I warn you, you'd better have a good story, for we are going to supply final in a race of the Middle East war."

"Kissinger also noted that the world, with the exception of the United States, was living at an age of Israel. He is particularly worried about the Mediterranean area.

The Greeks have indicated that the United States won't be permitted to use the base to supply final in a race of the Middle East war. Kissinger is also fearful that the Turks, who have relations ties to the United States, may bar Israeli shipments from the Israeli to the Arab side. This could be disastrous for Israel, which depends upon Iran for almost half of its oil.

"The Secret Service had a frantic Christmas trying to keep up with the first family on the Colorado ski slopes. The agents set up security headquarters in a portable White House van and special agents who handled themselves on the slopes, including a radio-equipped ski patrol, stood close to the President."

"He usually gave them an easy time on the packed slopes. But occasionally he led them down the more harrowing parts."

"Gerald Ford is also a friendly fellow, who likes to mingle with other skiers. What he looks like is a young kid, you know, you look accidentally middle class."

"It's that good, better, best. Now, the most important question: Do you or your parents have any money?"

"I'm afraid not."

"But the President's four teenage children, Steve, Mike, Jack, and Susan who ran the agents ragged. The Ford youngsters skied down the back slopes through the powder, giving their bodyguards a wild chase."

"Some agents, we are told, are longing for the Jesuit student Nichols, Johnsons and Eisenhower."

Slight Night

Richard Nixon telephoned a few weeks ago from Washington. Shortly after he was forced out of the White House. They discussed the various questions and I'm sure that you will be able to make a decision that will be the best for all.

"And you, Mr. Kissinger?"

"I'm hopeful that you'll be honest. We have ways of finding out the truth."

"Yessir. Letters from my state concern the matter. It is too disturbing."

The Associated Press reports we were high on the list of private citizens whom the Central Intelligence Agency has kept under surveillance. Nevertheless, we want to be fair. It was the CIA's top officials, James Schlesinger, the former director, and William Colby, the present director, who put a stop to the illegal CIA spying on American citizens. It is also our duty to report that the CIA has the best record in Washington for accurate intelligence.

Mark Keough '76

"Just a few days ago, I was a page of statistics to the President. But today I am the President's visitor."

"Pain Am, the world's most experienced skier, gave us a run for our money with giving blacks an experience in drenching snow.

Civil Aeronautics Board investigators have quietly accused the American airlines of blocking blacks on crowded flights, by assigning them to the coach section while whites are given a choice of first class seats.

At last..."

In the name of conserving energy, the United Airlines is cutting down in ground zeroes to monorail porches at the homes of which they reside. In some homes, they wake up the Gill and make him turn it off. In the meantime, service tolls the air at some general's homes continue to burn brightly.

Continuous News Service

The Tech

By Storm Kasifman

The Scene: A well-dressed young man comes to the security office where he is to be greeted by a tall, thin individual wearing a conservative gray tweed suit, string tie, and starched white shirt. The young man, Jay Hammer, sprints the revolving door on the left, andsoftly walks down the hall. He sits down, perspiring slightly and looks at the phone. "Mr. Hammer, I am so glad that you finally made it here. I have been trying to get an appointment for over a month."

"Well, Hammer, you know that the work we do here is very important. We are always very busy. It isn't often that I have time to speak with a young man who.."

"Hammer, Mr. Hardcase."

"What?"

"Hammer, the name is Hammer."

"It doesn't matter, Hammer. Your name isn't important to me. Until today you have always been a page of statistics to me. Please do not bring personalities into the matter; it is too disturbing."

"Ah... sorry... ah..."

"Don't waste my time, Hammer. Let's get on with the business. Now, do you have your references?"

"Yes, I have been talking to the state congressmen and other colleagues. A full statement from my accountant. An up-to-date tax return. A list of your affiliations from my bank."

"Good. Now tell me about your experiences and how can we tell if you are an immoral sexual act? I warn you, you'd better have a good story, for we are going to supply final in a race of the Middle East war."

"Kissinger also noted that the world, with the exception of the United States, was living at an age of Israel. He is particularly worried about the Mediterranean area.

The Greeks have indicated that the United States won't be permitted to use the base to supply final in a race of the Middle East war. Kissinger is also fearful that the Turks, who have relations ties to the United States, may bar Israeli shipments from the Israeli to the Arab side. This could be disastrous for Israel, which depends upon Iran for almost half of its oil.

"The Secret Service had a frantic Christmas trying to keep up with the first family on the Colorado ski slopes. The agents set up security headquarters in a portable White House van and special agents who handled themselves on the slopes, including a radio-equipped ski patrol, stood close to the President."

"He usually gave them an easy time on the packed slopes. But occasionally he led them down the more harrowing parts."

"Gerald Ford is also a friendly fellow, who likes to mingle with other skiers. What he looks like is a young kid, you know, you look accidentally middle class."

"It's that good, better, best. Now, the most important question: Do you or your parents have any money?"

"I'm afraid not."

"But the President's four teenage children, Steve, Mike, Jack, and Susan who ran the agents ragged. The Ford youngsters skied down the back slopes through the powder, giving their bodyguards a wild chase."

"Some agents, we are told, are longing for the Jesuit student Nichols, Johnsons and Eisenhower."

Slight Night

Richard Nixon telephoned a few weeks ago from Washington. Shortly after he was forced out of the White House. They discussed the various questions and I'm sure that you will be able to make a decision that will be the best for all.

"And you, Mr. Kissinger?"

"I'm hopeful that you'll be honest. We have ways of finding out the truth."

"Yessir. Letters from my state concern the matter. It is too disturbing."

The Associated Press reports we were high on the list of private citizens whom the Central Intelligence Agency has kept under surveillance. Nevertheless, we want to be fair. It was the CIA's top officials, James Schlesinger, the former director, and William Colby, the present director, who put a stop to the illegal CIA spying on American citizens. It is also our duty to report that the CIA has the best record in Washington for accurate intelligence.

Mark Keough '76

"Just a few days ago, I was a page of statistics to the President. But today I am the President's visitor."

"Pain Am, the world's most experienced skier, gave us a run for our money with giving blacks an experience in drenching snow.

Civil Aeronautics Board investigators have quietly accused the American airlines of blocking blacks on crowded flights, by assigning them to the coach section while whites are given a choice of first class seats.

At last..."