Nichols downs hockey

Spurs ran high in the MIT dressing room at the Worcester Arena Wednesday evening, despite the fact that the Engineer hockey team had dropped a 3-0 decision to Nichols University.

"It was a moral victory," cited Coach Wayne Pecknold, as his team had fought relentlessly in the final buzzer.

The more itself was not indicative of the overall play, in which MIT was outshot by a 36-31 margin, as it yielded three early goals, but proceeded to play superbly, giving up only two more scores, one being at the final buzzer.

The Engineers appeared to get stronger with time, and held the beleaguered Nichols goal-tender with 16 shots in the final period, most of them from close in, but failed to tally. This period was highlighted by Forte forechecking and hitting by all three forward lines in what was truly a team effort. Honorable mention must go to Dan Costa '78 in goal and to the MIT defensive corps of Don Silverstein '77, Marc Trauntz '78, and Bob Laurenson '74, which was forced to play double shifts due to numerous injuries.

The game, which was relatively penalty-free, was marred by a freak accident, as Evan Schwartz '73 suffered a 19 arrests facial cut by an errant stick. He was able to return to play, however, within a few minutes. The team will be back in action at home tomorrow night at 7:00, bolstered by the return of several key players, as they take on their arch rivals at Tufts University.
