Brown wins MIT Invitational: Radcliffe, second, MIT third

By Glenn Brownstein

Handily defeating both the University of Chicago, 70-65, and Radcliffe, Brown University capped the third annual MIT Invitational Women's Basketball Tournament at Rockwell Cage (34-35 in last weekend), by toppling Chicago, 43-35 in Saturday's consolation final.

In Friday's first round games, Radcliffe and MIT engaged in an exciting, high-scoring battle, Radcliffe eventually emerging the victor, 41-38. The Engineer women's squad continued its fast-paced, extremely rough team game and was the victor, 41-38. The Engineers' defense became quite aggressive and was the factor in their win. MIT led 42-37 going into the half, and Coles pulled down 16 rebounds. The Engineers had their first win in over a month, and their third in nine games this year.

Mauro Sullivan '76 led MIT with 13 points (six free throw line) and Rogenkamp followed with 12. Linda Yester '76 was high rebounder with 15. Chicago again had only one player in double figures, as Cochran poured in ten points.

The final game Saturday was an anticlimax, as Brown opened up a 1-4-point halftime lead and kept increasing its advantage in the nearly two-hour game, winning by a 14-point margin, 67-53.

Deidrick had an excellent game to lead Brown, hitting 12 of 22 from the free and scoring 27 points, enabling the Bears to score the 17 rebounds, making seven steals, Johnson accumulated 19 points, 19 in the first half, and had 16 rebounds. The Bruins shot 33% (Please turn to page 7)

Gymnastics trounces CCSC

By Paul J. Buey

The MIT men's gymnastics team raised its record to 3-2 Wednesday with a strong performance against the Boston College (BC) at the Central Connecticut State College. It was the second consecutive meet that the Engineers were defeated by BC, losing 123-117. The Engineers set two school records at the meet, the first a new career record for total score, 141.4 to CCSC's 123.2, the second a new school record for the floor exercise, 47.5 to CCSC's 46.8.

The meet was a three point lead on the first two events, David Deidrick led the Engineers with a 11.0 on parallel bars and a 13.0 on pommel horse, but he was unable to score on the bar in the final round. Buey and Thiem took second place on the vault and third in the floor exercise, respectively. The team was able to increase its lead, but was unable to win.

Linda Yester '76 attempts a jumper over the outstretched arm of Chicago's Robin Chais (13) in Saturday's tournament consolation game which MIT won, 43-35. Yester had seven points and 15 rebounds in the victory, which snapped a five-game losing streak for the women's team.
