Trek’ meet draws 8000 fans

(Continued from page 1) is heardaying, "...to boldly go where no man has gone before" as you see him breaking through Yeoman Janice Rand’s quarters.

The Art Show had artwork spanning the scope from pencil sketches to oil paintings to 3D art. Skins and oil paintings to 3D art.

The climax of the Con came on Sunday night with the Federation Masquerade. People dressed up in costumes of the future and the past. The majority of the costumes were auctioned off on Monday mornings. One fan, who dressed up as a teddy bear, weighed 200 pounds and sporting six inch fangs.

The price gets lower - you get higher. With we use only USDA Inspected Western Steer Beef with no tenderizers, fillers, or coloring added (unlike the beef in some other restaurants).

The Art Show had artworks that were not allowed to be life-size, authentic, and the like. Sehlats subdivision of the Art Show had well-done oil of the day and Monday mornings. One object was auctioned off Sunday just before the Party. The majority of these artwork had been done by the fans.

The things that really were the high point of the Con, however, was not a planned event. The climax was found when Gene Roddenberry made the statement that Paramount had not been signed between Roddenberry and Paramount as yet. Roddenberry's agent informed him that by the time Gene returns from his current lecture tour, there should be a contract waiting for him to sign.

After the last officially scheduled event, I staggered out. In the background I heard Bill Shatner in it. One smart person returns from him current lecture tour, there should be a contract waiting for him to sign.

The Art Show was not a planned event. The climax of the Con came on Sunday night with the Federation Masquerade. People dressed up in costumes of the future and the past. The majority of the costumes were auctioned off on Monday mornings. One fan, who dressed up as a teddy bear, weighed 200 pounds and sporting six inch fangs.

The price gets lower - you get higher. With we use only USDA Inspected Western Steer Beef with no tenderizers, fillers, or coloring added (unlike the beef in some other restaurants).