B-ball notches 1st NE win

(Continued from page 12)

time Tufts had left the field and was ready to hit. Then came the incredible decision, since the umpire at the plate decided that the ball had only hit the ground, ordered Tufts to take the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squash the rally.

From then on the game was nasty, featuring junior Mike Royal's tackle of Bob Berluti between third and home, after Berluti had crashed third baseman Felton on an earlier play knocking him out of the game. Tufts tried to give the game back when Rick Olson doubled and a triple by Maconi put runners on first, second, and third with two outs, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squashed the rally.

From then on the game was nasty, featuring junior Mike Royal's tackle of Bob Berluti between third and home, after Berluti had crashed third base man Felton on an earlier play knocking him out of the game. Tufts tried to give the game back when Rick Olson doubled and a triple by Maconi put runners on first, second, and third with two outs, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squashed the rally.

From then on the game was nasty, featuring junior Mike Royal's tackle of Bob Berluti between third and home, after Berluti had crashed third base man Felton on an earlier play knocking him out of the game. Tufts tried to give the game back when Rick Olson doubled and a triple by Maconi put runners on first, second, and third with two outs, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squashed the rally.

From then on the game was nasty, featuring junior Mike Royal's tackle of Bob Berluti between third and home, after Berluti had crashed third base man Felton on an earlier play knocking him out of the game. Tufts tried to give the game back when Rick Olson doubled and a triple by Maconi put runners on first, second, and third with two outs, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squashed the rally.

From then on the game was nasty, featuring junior Mike Royal's tackle of Bob Berluti between third and home, after Berluti had crashed third base man Felton on an earlier play knocking him out of the game. Tufts tried to give the game back when Rick Olson doubled and a triple by Maconi put runners on first, second, and third with two outs, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squashed the rally.

From then on the game was nasty, featuring junior Mike Royal's tackle of Bob Berluti between third and home, after Berluti had crashed third base man Felton on an earlier play knocking him out of the game. Tufts tried to give the game back when Rick Olson doubled and a triple by Maconi put runners on first, second, and third with two outs, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field again, put the runners on first, second and third with two outs, with MIT still at bat.

This was understandably too much for the Jumbos, who angrily claimed then that the ball had never hit the ground, that it wasn't right to let their pitcher sit for fifteen minutes waiting for a call to be made, but the home plate umpire stuck to his decision, and the infuriated Jumbos took the field. However, Rick Olson '78 hit an embarrassing no-inning ground ball to the second baseman, who flipped it to first to squashed the rally.