Faculty OK's grades changes

Professor Roy Knolow '54, chairman of the Ad Hoc Committee, proposed the suggested changes in the faculty rules, which were subsequently adopted. He noted that some items had not been clarified during previous faculty debates, including the comment mechanism, on which the faculty had split evenly in two votes at the February meeting, and the question of plus-minus grades. The professors who had drafted the amendments, he added, chose to include the comment mechanism but not plus-minus grades.

Plus-minus grades, which had been proposed by Associate Professor of Electrical Engineering Stephen Schwartz at the February faculty meeting, were endorsed at that meeting by a 48-37 vote. At the March faculty meeting, a "sense of the faculty" resolution rejecting plus/minus grades was passed, 77-33. Schwartz criticized the proposed changes in the faculty rules, saying that "the committee that drafted the regulations wanted comments, so they are in the regulations." He proposed an amendment to allow plus/minus grades "so the faculty can decide." The faculty then voted against plus-minus grades by a large margin.
