PGD charges LCA held frosh; IFC Judcomm is investigating

By The Tech Staff

An incident involving the Lambda Chi Alpha and Phi Gamma Delta is under cover of the Inter-Fraternity Conference's judicial committee, The Tech has learned.

The investigation involves an anonymous complaint that Fiji freshmen were reportedly caught by LCA's as the former were painting out smoot marks on the Harvard Bridge one recent night.

The treatment of the Fiji's, who were reportedly taken to the LCA house and held for several hours, was "fairly extreme" according to Associate Dean for Student Affairs Kenneth Browning '56.

"What's happened is being properly handled by Judcomm. They're interested in it. It is an effective committee. There is a lot they can handle. This is one of those things," he declared. He declined to provide any details of the treatment of the Fiji's.

The LCA pledge class is reportedly responsible each year for repainting the smoot marks which mark the distance across the bridge; 364.4 smooth and 364.9 smooth.

While cautioning no direct knowledge of the case, IFC President Mark Suchon '76 of DU said, when asked what role he thought IFC had in the "situations," that "it's a pretty open question." He said reports he had heard were "disturbing.

Suchon said he was involved in early mediation attempts.

"I think the very beginning had a hand in it. I was talking to both houses, to get them to talk it out. It was clear right away there were differences. One house decided the best way to get justice was to go to Judcomm."

Suchon said he did not hold any bias in the case since it was referred to Judcomm.

IFC Judcomm co-chairman John Thain '77 of DU said the investigation included, according to Thain, as well as the members of the investigators for the case, and the speed with which they complete their report.

No investigators had been chosen as of Sunday night. The members of the Judcomm involved, according to Thain, as well as the members of the investigators for the case, and the speed with which they complete their report.

The scheduling of the report depends on the Judcomm members involved, according to Thain, as well as the schedule of the investigators for the case, and the speed with which they complete their report.
