The Tech number

DECEMBER 22, 1897.

The Tech number

The presidents address.

It was an inspiring audience which President Pritchett faced on Wednesday afternoon of the first day of the new term, before a markedly longer and more enthusiastic student body than that which had assembled in the great hall of the Institute last year.

President Pritchett made his speech amid a great many and very interesting developments and changes. The student body had grown from 2,000 to 2,600, and the student body was larger by more than 500. The student body was more interested in athletics and more interested in social work. The student body was more interested in the work of the Institute and more interested in the work of the Institute for the student body. The student body was more interested in the work of the Institute for the student body. The student body was more interested in the work of the Institute for the student body.

President Pritchett made his speech amid a great many and very interesting developments and changes. The student body had grown from 2,000 to 2,600, and the student body was larger by more than 500. The student body was more interested in athletics and more interested in social work. The student body was more interested in the work of the Institute and more interested in the work of the Institute for the student body. The student body was more interested in the work of the Institute for the student body. The student body was more interested in the work of the Institute for the student body.