Hockey edged in overtime; cagers clip Nicholls, 70-68

By Glenn Brownstein

A disputed goal 19 seconds into Fennoy over-time propelled Bunker Hill Community College to a 6-5 victory over the Massachusetts Tech club Wednesday night at the MIT rink.

The close-winner was tallied shortly after the period's opening face-off when the puck got behind the net that was shot past Engineer goalie Dan Costa, who was being held out of position by a Bunker Hill player when the shot was taken. The decision was upheld, the referee saying interference violation was being committed, but the referee ruled it was not.

that an MIT player had pushed the Bunker Hill skater into Costa, forcing the situation. Dave Toole '79 opened the scoring with a goal at 5:39 of the first period that was assisted by Kevin Depaur '79 and Rich MacKinnon '79. Bunker Hill scored two goals in 2:38 to take the lead, but Ken Mortensen '77 tied the game just ten seconds before the period scoring at 4-2 Bunker Hill.

The visitors from Charlestown scored twice more to take a 4-2 lead, with MIT's Jim Paulsen G taking a perfect low pass from captain Carsten Mortensen '77 to close out the first period scoring at 4-2 Bunker Hill.

BHCC drew first blood in the second period, but goals by Ken Mortensen and Tom Bryan G tied the game at 5:45 remaining in the period and no goals in any minutes.

Neither team was able to score in the third session setting up the brief overtime in which BHCC knocked in the winning score.

MIT outshot Bunker Hill 40-26 in the game, which was the Engineers' third straight loss.

The skaters, will (for a change), a team they've defeated twice this season.

Despite playing a generally mediocre game, men's basketball (6-10) managed to edge at equally poor Nichols team 70-68 Saturday night in the Cage. Competing before a small, but interested, crowd, the Engineers took a small lead that is held for most of the game and survived a late rally to pick up their second win in a row.

Freshman Tom Berman '77 and Bob Dwyer '78 led the Engineers, while tricot Captain John Dowd '76 had a standout night on defense, pulling down 14 rebounds.

MIT, which had a tough 80-79 decision to Bowdoin earlier this season, will attempt to average earlier defeat against the Polar Bears in the Cage tonight.

Women BB tips Radcliffe

By Caren Pens

The MIT women's basketball team defeated Radcliffe 39-38 Monday night in a game which offered little to the basketball purist, but was hard fought throughout. It marked the Engineers' first victory ever over their Cambridge rivals.

Lynne Richardson '76 saved the game for MIT when she tied up Kitty Fulton of Radcliffe with seven seconds remaining in a turnover, MIT controlled the tap and Mauna Sullivan '76 held the ball until time ran out.

Of the eleven team members that made the starting lineup for MIT this was the first time that she has competed in her home Chicago area.

The tournament was not as widely publicized as last year's MIT Invitational. Local news programs showed clips of first day action, but the crowds were sparse and the atmosphere from last year simply wasn't present.

There were only about three hundred people in attendance for the final game of the tournament.

The MIT women, who raised most of the money required from the community to participate, were not without their detractors. The coach, manager, advisor, and women's athletic director know well with the emotional opening game win. That evening the team found out that its starting center and leading scorer, Diane Ozurillo '79 would be lost for the tournament with a knee injury. (Ozurillo hurt her knee in the game last Wednesday against Tufts University.) Later in the day, the team learned that veteran guard Lina Jablonski '77 was lost for the rest of the tournament, sidelined with a severe case of the flu.

Down, but not out, MIT put on a strong show against the Maroons of Chicago.
