By Glenn Brownstein

Philip Gnecco '76 is a member of the table tennis team. A one-out, bases-loaded single by Jay Covppeter '79 broke a ninth-inning tie and gave MIT an exciting 9-8 victory over Suffolk University Tuesday at rain-soaked Briggs Field.

After each team scored a single run in the second, Suffolk added one each in the third and fourth before catcher Dan Sundberg '77 cut the MIT deficit to 3-2 with a towering home run in the last of the fourth.

Shortstop Vin Maccii '76 gave the Beavers their first lead in the fourth on a two-run, double-roundtripper that knocked out Suffolk starter Mike DeBell. An inning later, though, MIT starting pitcher Mike Renf '76 surrendered the gamewinning hit.

MIT faces Brandeis at home Saturday in a 3 p.m. double.

The MIT table tennis team finished its season in third place in the Ivy League conference this year, ending two years of MIT dominance of the sport. Rutgers captured the title easily, losing only one B-team match to Princeton. Columbia edged MIT by one point of a possible 80-81 to claim second place, dropping MIT to third.

Steve Chan G '85 put in the best performance of any MIT team member, winning second place in the individual Ivy League tournament. Dominic Ho '86 also played well, bringing home the men's consolation trophy.

There are plans to form a league of the teams from Rhode Island and Massachusetts schools next year, with matches to be scheduled during the fall season so that they would not interfere with the regular Ivy League schedule. If this works successfully, then the following year the entire East Coast will be divided into regional leagues, with the winners in each region competing at some central location to determine the top team in the East.

By Lee Bonnell

(Ke'bonnell '77 is a member of the golf team.)

In a match as exciting as any it has played in recent years, the golf team defeated rival Universites of Lowell 43-4 at The Pines Country Club Saturday.

The match was highlighted by two sudden-death play-offs, as Pete Wolczanski '78 and Les Sanu '79 finished the regulation 18 holes in a deadlock with their Lowell opponents. Trailling 3-4 in match points at the time, the engineers needed to win both of the undecided matches for an overall victory — not an easy task, despite the loss of Wolczanski's play was especially noteworthy, he scored the hole on the first hole to clinch the title.

Other winners for the Engineers were Mark Swenson '78, whose score of 81 included a spectacular eagle 2 on the 12th hole, and Bob Kneckel '77 with a 78. These five scores, along with 91 and 83 from Wolczanski and Sanu, and an excellent 81 by Mike Yareck '79 in a losing cause, made the team one of the lowest scoring of the season.

On Monday, May 30, the team faced the dividend C.C. and four other teams in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate Championship, playing under chilly and wet conditions, the Engineers totalled 662 shots, placing at 10th place. Wolczanski and Sanu, and an excellent 81 by Mike Yareck '79 in a losing cause, made the team one of the lowest scoring of the season.

On Monday, May 30, the team faced the dividend C.C. and four other teams in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate Championship, playing under chilly and wet conditions, the Engineers totalled 662 shots, placing at 10th place. Wolczanski and Sanu, and an excellent 81 by Mike Yareck '79 in a losing cause, made the team one of the lowest scoring of the season.

On Monday, May 30, the team faced the dividend C.C. and four other teams in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate Championship, playing under chilly and wet conditions, the Engineers totalled 662 shots, placing at 10th place. Wolczanski and Sanu, and an excellent 81 by Mike Yareck '79 in a losing cause, made the team one of the lowest scoring of the season.

On Monday, May 30, the team faced the dividend C.C. and four other teams in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate Championship, playing under chilly and wet conditions, the Engineers totalled 662 shots, placing at 10th place. Wolczanski and Sanu, and an excellent 81 by Mike Yareck '79 in a losing cause, made the team one of the lowest scoring of the season.

On Monday, May 30, the team faced the dividend C.C. and four other teams in the Greater Boston Intercollegiate Championship, playing under chilly and wet conditions, the Engineers totalled 662 shots, placing at 10th place. Wolczanski and Sanu, and an excellent 81 by Mike Yareck '79 in a losing cause, made the team one of the lowest scoring of the season.