Dorm room priority given to overcrowded freshmen

(Continued from page 1) A total of 90 freshmen remain in "limbo" awaiting later rounds of assignments. According to Assistant Dean for Student Affairs Ken Browning '66, more overcrowding could result if the frazzled rush fails short of its goal.

Freshmen who agreed to live in overcrowded rooms received first choice among the dormitories, as part of a plan to deal with the severe overcrowding projected. According to Browning, most of the response came from freshmen who were "ready to get into Burton." There were 18 groups of three that applied for triples, but only 12 triples were available.

The reduction in crowding from the projected level was due to a class 50 persons smaller than planned, and to the formation of a new fraternity (ADP) and an Independent Women's Living Group. This reduction was felt most in Burton. According to Housemaster James Bruce, the house was to have around 35 triples, but will have close to 20 — "less than the previous two years."

Planned crowding in East Campus is also down, according to MacGregor Room Assignments Chairman Marty Herman '79, these plans have been cancelled.
