The "Report on Writing Instruction at MIT," co-authored by Hanham and Associate Dean Donald Browning, was formed for Tek Talk will be accepted as the official version of events leading to the present situation. Already Provost Walter Robenshak has recommended the Report to students and faculty requesting information of the Writing Program from him. A letter to one student contend that the Report "provides a perspective upon the context in which the 'Writing Program' has developed.

The "Report on Writing Instruction at MIT," co-authored by Hanham and Associate Dean Donald Browning, will be accepted as the official version of events leading to the present situation. Already Provost Walter Robenshak has recommended the Report to students and faculty requesting information of the Writing Program from him. A letter to one student contended that the Report "provides a perspective upon the context in which the 'Writing Program' has developed.

The story, which focuses on the possible administration change, has also been disseminated by the Harvard Broadcasting Company (NBC), Columbia Broadcasting Systems (CBS), and National Public Radio. In addition, the AP story was also picked up by a local TV network, because they do not necessarily have the right to speak. However, please turn to page 3.

The "Report on Writing Instruction at MIT," co-authored by Hanham and Associate Dean Donald Browning, will be accepted as the official version of events leading to the present situation. Already Provost Walter Robenshak has recommended the Report to students and faculty requesting information of the Writing Program from him. A letter to one student contended that the Report "provides a perspective upon the context in which the 'Writing Program' has developed.

By David B. Koretz

While four students involved with "short time" appeal, asking the Board of Directors (COD) hearings, news media throughout North America and Europe are capitalizing on the uproar created by the publication of the "Consumer Guide to MIT Men" nearly three weeks ago.

The charges brought to the COD by the Dean for Student Affairs Caroli Eisenberg are "misleading of personal, professional embarrassment and damaging the reputation of those on the list and defrauding a significant portion of the MIT community," according to one of the four students.

The students, asked not to be identified, probably face hearings Friday, all three being conducted in executive session.

The COD has several alter- nate dates for the hearings. The AP story was also picked up by a local TV network, because they do not necessarily have the right to speak. However, please turn to page 3.

By Steve Kirsch

By last Friday, 1,102 prospective freshmen indicated that they plan to attend next fall. This is 102 more than the last year set by the Academic Council in December.

Furthermore, 143 students who the Admissions have offered admission have not yet replied. But the situation is not as dire as the syllabus set by the Academic Council in December.

The AP story was also picked up by a local TV network, because they do not necessarily have the right to speak. However, please turn to page 3.

By Steve Kirsch

Overcoming the decision to house freshmen in the dorms of the Harvard House, the Redi-Gazer uniform for the Massachusett Women's Association was announced in March. Association President Kenneth C. Browning of April, nine members of the faculty supported by five others in support of Provost Walter Ross, Chairman of the Faculty, was announced in March. Ross's only action was to request that Hanham write the Report.

By David K. Koretz

All sides are preparing for what may well be the final battle of the Writing Program controversy. At tomorrow's faculty meeting, the most significant item on the agenda is a motion from Associate Director of Admissions Julia C. McLellan said that she could "not see a reason for the difference between the target and the number of students who accept the offer to accept the offer. Now, the students who accept the offer is the cause of the problem. For the past several years, the yield had remained fairly constant around 57 percent. Then last year an experiment was tried in which MIT switched from its traditional offer date of March 24 to "rolling offer" date of April 17. The yield dropped to around 45 percent. The experiment was not continued; the yield the next year is at 57 percent. It's a decided difference," McLellan said.

By Steve Kirsch

The "Report on Writing Instruction at MIT," co-authored by Hanham and Associate Dean Donald Browning was read to Tek Talk will be accepted as the official version of events leading to the present situation. Already Provost Walter Robenshak has recommended the Report to students and faculty requesting information of the Writing Program from him. A letter to one student contended that the Report "provides a perspective upon the context in which the 'Writing Program' has developed.

However, as it has been pointed out in The Tech (April 29) and in a 31-page "analysis" writing by Writing Program lecturer Sanford Kaye and Joseph Browning, the report is a misleading reiteration of the Administration's official arguments. Two lecturers have been refused space for rebuttal in Tek Talk by Vice President Constantine Simonides, who asserted that the newspaper is a "vehicle of official communications.

The "Report on Writing Instruction at MIT," co-authored by Hanham and Associate Dean Donald Browning was read to Tek Talk will be accepted as the official version of events leading to the present situation. Already Provost Walter Robenshak has recommended the Report to students and faculty requesting information of the Writing Program from him. A letter to one student contended that the Report "provides a perspective upon the context in which the 'Writing Program' has developed.

The story, which focuses on the possible administration change, has also been disseminated by the Harvard Broadcasting Company (NBC), Columbia Broadcasting Systems (CBS), and National Public Radio. In addition, the AP story was also picked up by a local TV network, because they do not necessarily have the right to speak. However, please turn to page 3.