MIT's 30 fraternities and nine independent women's groups began to rush members of the class of '81 yesterday as the freshmen magazine officially kicked off R/O week.

The fraternity members, charged with the duty of selecting their initiates, gathered at the conclusion of the speech of the President, Jerome Winer, Dean for Student Affairs. President Winer led the students in the chant, "Welcome to Harvard, the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Undergraduate Association President Peter Berke said, "A moment of silence."

A moment of silence, a moment of silence.,

I'm happy that MIT is our home.

Runge, a United States professor of management, committed suicide yesterday at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's building 34. Pouring into Building 34 on September 1, 1977, Runge, the former chair of the Department of Economics, committed suicide by hanging himself. The police arrived on the scene at about 7:30, but he was still alive when the police arrived.

The police found Runge's body in the basement of Building 34, where he had been working earlier in the day. Runge was a well-known figure in the MIT community, and his death has caused a great deal of concern among students and faculty.

The MIT community is mourning the loss of Runge, who was known for his contributions to the field of management. His death has left a空空如也 in the MIT community, and his loss will be felt for many years to come.
