The varsity soccer team has begun a season with peculiar fashion. One facet they performed was defying previously undefeated Brandeis. Coach Alexi assists the team's overall goals and prospects for the rest of the season.

Shakespeare Ensemble creator and current director Murray Biggs quickly asks about his feelings towards the group, his approach toward directing Shakespearean productions, and the ensemble's up-coming production of Love's Labor's Lost.

"How many guys are there?"
"Five," I answered.
"Whoops? Five for two thousand? Do you sleep well at night?"
"He was still laughing.
"Level with me" - he was my friend now. "A lot of action, huh? Different one every night! Get me a couple of phone numbers? Loose as a goose! Not to trust! Never a dull moment!"

"Whooee! Five for two thousand!"
"I hate that question - it's hell." I said. His mouth was still open, mind buzzing.
"It's a very trusting person there was some of the other residents. Why have only Houses 2, 3, and 4 of New House were officially-christened, each with a separate name to honor given titles of large sums of money for academic purposes, in addition to the corporate gift to the hospital. The dormitory deeper embarrassment. The dormitories are still needed.

Blood drive soon

Across the Institute everyone shows an interest in the medical requirements on the back of the form. Completed forms can be dropped in fratrine mail or taken to the TCA's office (Student Center, fourth floor).

The traditional living group contests will be held this year. Beer legs will be awarded to the first dormitory and three dorms with the highest percentage of blood donors. In addition, there will be one key awarded to the most improved dorm and most improved fraternity. Last year's champions, fraternity members, donated blood, while 400 pints were collected from undergrads in dorms.

Marc-Emile Durflage '80 died early Sunday evening from injuries apparently sustained in a fall. He was pro-gram director of the Technology Community Association.

The full blood drive will begin Wednesday, Oct. 29 with high hopes - the goal is for 3000 pints of blood to be collected for the Northeast Regional Red Cross.

Steve's sundae scoops skip out

The members of a newly formed labor union at Steve's Ice Cream walked off the job last Saturday night, claiming that the new owners, Joseph (Joe) and Nino Cruznales, have not been bargaining in good faith with them.

Calling themselves the Steve's Ice Cream Employees' Movement (SICEM), the group comprises eight of the nine non-managerial employees at Steve's. All but one of them have worked at Steve's for over two and a half years. They plan to stay out until a satisfactory contract can be signed. "We'll have to work at other jobs, maybe," said one worker who has scooped ice cream at Steve's for more than two years, "but we're prepared for a long strike, if that's what it takes."

Steve's, opened on June 19, (1971), is considered by stars to have the finest ice cream in the Boston area. Steve's customers wait in line outside the shop in Davis Square, Somerville, 20-45 minutes to get a cone or a sundae. Steve's is still open upon the usual hours (2 to 11:30pm), but business has not been too good, according to Joe. Last fall, Nino Harrell, the founder of Steve's, sold the store to Joe, who is a part-time, "It's time for us to take a dormitory. Their original owner, University of Massachusetts, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Wednesday, Oct. 29 with high hopes - the goal is for 3000 pints of blood to be collected for the Northeast Regional Red Cross. The theme for this year's drive is "Give Blood - Bring A Friend." Last spring's blood drive saw 1195 pints of blood collected. One fifth of which came from first-time donors. The TCA, sponsor of the blood drive, asks those who have donated previously to try to donate again. The TCA feels that those who have donated previously are more likely to encourage friends to donate. Small groups that would like to donate together will be accommodated.

Scheduling for the drive has already started. The blood drive staff aseptics are making time for blood donors in order to decrease crowds at the drive. Schedules forms can be picked up at all living groups and in various places.

Blood drive soon

Throughout the Institute everyone shows an interest in the medical requirements on the back of the form. Completed forms can be dropped in fratrine mail or taken to the TCA's office (Student Center, fourth floor).

The traditional living group contests will be held this year. Beer legs will be awarded to the first dormitory and three dorms with the highest percentage of blood donors. In addition, there will be one key awarded to the most improved dorm and most improved fraternity. Last year's champions, fraternity members, donated blood, while 400 pints were collected from undergrads in dorms.

Marc-Emile Durflage '80 died early Sunday evening from injuries apparently sustained in a fall. He was program director of the Technology Community Association.

The full blood drive will begin Wednesday, Oct. 29 with high hopes - the goal is for 3000 pints of blood to be collected for the Northeast Regional Red Cross.

Steve's sundae scoops skip out

The members of a newly formed labor union at Steve's Ice Cream walked off the job last Saturday night, claiming that the new owners, Joseph (Joe) and Nino Cruznales, have not been bargaining in good faith with them.

Calling themselves the Steve's Ice Cream Employees' Movement (SICEM), the group comprises eight of the nine non-managerial employees at Steve's. All but one of them have worked at Steve's for over two and a half years. They plan to stay out until a satisfactory contract can be signed. "We'll have to work at other jobs, maybe," said one worker who has scooped ice cream at Steve's for more than two years, "but we're prepared for a long strike, if that's what it takes."

Steve's, opened on June 19, (1971), is considered by stars to have the finest ice cream in the Boston area. Steve's customers wait in line outside the shop in Davis Square, Somerville, 20-45 minutes to get a cone or a sundae. Steve's is still open upon the usual hours (2 to 11:30pm), but business has not been too good, according to Joe. Last fall, Nino Harrell, the founder of Steve's, sold the store to Joe, who is a part-time, "It's time for us to take a dormitory. Their original owner, University of Massachusetts, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Wednesday, Oct. 29 with high hopes - the goal is for 3000 pints of blood to be collected for the Northeast Regional Red Cross. The theme for this year's drive is "Give Blood - Bring A Friend." Last spring's blood drive saw 1195 pints of blood collected. One fifth of which came from first-time donors. The TCA, sponsor of the blood drive, asks those who have donated previously to try to donate again. The TCA feels that those who have donated previously are more likely to encourage friends to donate. Small groups that would like to donate together will be accommodated.

Scheduling for the drive has already started. The blood drive staff aseptics are making time for blood donors in order to decrease crowds at the drive. Schedules forms can be picked up at all living groups and in various places.

Blood drive soon

Throughout the Institute everyone shows an interest in the medical requirements on the back of the form. Completed forms can be dropped in fratrine mail or taken to the TCA's office (Student Center, fourth floor).

The traditional living group contests will be held this year. Beer legs will be awarded to the first dormitory and three dorms with the highest percentage of blood donors. In addition, there will be one key awarded to the most improved dorm and most improved fraternity. Last year's champions, fraternity members, donated blood, while 400 pints were collected from undergrads in dorms.

Marc-Emile Durflage '80 died early Sunday evening from injuries apparently sustained in a fall. He was program director of the Technology Community Association.

The full blood drive will begin Wednesday, Oct. 29 with high hopes - the goal is for 3000 pints of blood to be collected for the Northeast Regional Red Cross. The theme for this year's drive is "Give Blood - Bring A Friend." Last spring's blood drive saw 1195 pints of blood collected. One fifth of which came from first-time donors. The TCA, sponsor of the blood drive, asks those who have donated previously to try to donate again. The TCA feels that those who have donated previously are more likely to encourage friends to donate. Small groups that would like to donate together will be accommodated.

Scheduling for the drive has already started. The blood drive staff aseptics are making time for blood donors in order to decrease crowds at the drive. Schedules forms can be picked up at all living groups and in various places.

Blood drive soon

Throughout the Institute everyone shows an interest in the medical requirements on the back of the form. Completed forms can be dropped in fratrine mail or taken to the TCA's office (Student Center, fourth floor).

The traditional living group contests will be held this year. Beer legs will be awarded to the first dormitory and three dorms with the highest percentage of blood donors. In addition, there will be one key awarded to the most improved dorm and most improved fraternity. Last year's champions, fraternity members, donated blood, while 400 pints were collected from undergrads in dorms.