By Michael Taviss

The Chicago Bears, a struggling team, won again on Tuesday as it captured both its matches in a three-way round-robin competition held at MIT. The two visiting teams were Tufts and the University of New Hampshire (UNH).

The first match was between MIT and Tufts. Tufts was the weaker of the two visiting teams and Coach David Castanon stayed with almost all junior varsity players in this match.

In the first game of the match, the Engineers fell far behind in the first quarter, but they played extremely well. After the second quarter, they kept on winning.

Tufts had several potential scorers, but they could not take advantage of them. As soon as the first game of the MIT, Tufts started scoring. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 11-7, 15-7. The second game was a tough match in the evening.

As at the first game of the MIT-UNH match started, one could see that this was going to be a long, slow contest where each point would have to be won by dint of superior skill. Although MIT generally had control of the first part of this game, and was able to get the score up to 8-2 in its favor, UNH was by no means intimidated.

After several turnovers and many exciting plays, MIT played well, but UNH was on top, 11-8. The second game was the second game, but that's about as far as the game got. The Engineers ran right over Wheaton, bringing the score up to 11-1 in MIT's favor, without any problems. A small rally on Wheaton's part a little later made the score 13-7, but soon after that MIT was the game and the match, 15-7.

This was the first time the junior varsity girls had ever played against a varsity team. As Coach Castanon put it, "It was nervous, otherwise they played very well."

MIT had a rest while UNH played Wheaton. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 13-7, 15-7. Tufts came the tough match of the evening.

As at the first game of the MIT-UNH match started, one could see that this was going to be a long, slow contest where each point would have to be won by dint of superior skill. Although MIT generally had control of the first part of this game, and was able to get the score up to 8-2 in its favor, UNH was by no means intimidated.

After several turnovers and many exciting plays, MIT played well, but UNH was on top, 11-8. The second game was the second game, but that's about as far as the game got. The Engineers ran right over Wheaton, bringing the score up to 11-1 in MIT's favor, without any problems. A small rally on Wheaton's part a little later made the score 13-7, but soon after that MIT was the game and the match, 15-7.

This was the first time the junior varsity girls had ever played against a varsity team. As Coach Castanon put it, "It was nervous, otherwise they played very well."

MIT had a rest while UNH played Wheaton. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 13-7, 15-7. Tufts came the tough match of the evening.

As at the first game of the MIT-UNH match started, one could see that this was going to be a long, slow contest where each point would have to be won by dint of superior skill. Although MIT generally had control of the first part of this game, and was able to get the score up to 8-2 in its favor, UNH was by no means intimidated.

After several turnovers and many exciting plays, MIT played well, but UNH was on top, 11-8. The second game was the second game, but that's about as far as the game got. The Engineers ran right over Wheaton, bringing the score up to 11-1 in MIT's favor, without any problems. A small rally on Wheaton's part a little later made the score 13-7, but soon after that MIT was the game and the match, 15-7.

This was the first time the junior varsity girls had ever played against a varsity team. As Coach Castanon put it, "It was nervous, otherwise they played very well."

MIT had a rest while UNH played Wheaton. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 13-7, 15-7. Tufts came the tough match of the evening.

As at the first game of the MIT-UNH match started, one could see that this was going to be a long, slow contest where each point would have to be won by dint of superior skill. Although MIT generally had control of the first part of this game, and was able to get the score up to 8-2 in its favor, UNH was by no means intimidated.

After several turnovers and many exciting plays, MIT played well, but UNH was on top, 11-8. The second game was the second game, but that's about as far as the game got. The Engineers ran right over Wheaton, bringing the score up to 11-1 in MIT's favor, without any problems. A small rally on Wheaton's part a little later made the score 13-7, but soon after that MIT was the game and the match, 15-7.

This was the first time the junior varsity girls had ever played against a varsity team. As Coach Castanon put it, "It was nervous, otherwise they played very well."

MIT had a rest while UNH played Wheaton. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 13-7, 15-7. Tufts came the tough match of the evening.

As at the first game of the MIT-UNH match started, one could see that this was going to be a long, slow contest where each point would have to be won by dint of superior skill. Although MIT generally had control of the first part of this game, and was able to get the score up to 8-2 in its favor, UNH was by no means intimidated.

After several turnovers and many exciting plays, MIT played well, but UNH was on top, 11-8. The second game was the second game, but that's about as far as the game got. The Engineers ran right over Wheaton, bringing the score up to 11-1 in MIT's favor, without any problems. A small rally on Wheaton's part a little later made the score 13-7, but soon after that MIT was the game and the match, 15-7.

This was the first time the junior varsity girls had ever played against a varsity team. As Coach Castanon put it, "It was nervous, otherwise they played very well."

MIT had a rest while UNH played Wheaton. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 13-7, 15-7. Tufts came the tough match of the evening.

As at the first game of the MIT-UNH match started, one could see that this was going to be a long, slow contest where each point would have to be won by dint of superior skill. Although MIT generally had control of the first part of this game, and was able to get the score up to 8-2 in its favor, UNH was by no means intimidated.

After several turnovers and many exciting plays, MIT played well, but UNH was on top, 11-8. The second game was the second game, but that's about as far as the game got. The Engineers ran right over Wheaton, bringing the score up to 11-1 in MIT's favor, without any problems. A small rally on Wheaton's part a little later made the score 13-7, but soon after that MIT was the game and the match, 15-7.

This was the first time the junior varsity girls had ever played against a varsity team. As Coach Castanon put it, "It was nervous, otherwise they played very well."

MIT had a rest while UNH played Wheaton. There was no real competition in this match with UNH winning it in two games, 13-7, 15-7. Tufts came the tough match of the evening.