Sanctions on South Africa vetoed — Yesterday's attempts in the United Nations Security Council by Black African nations to impose a trade embargo on South Africa was blocked by the United States. Great Britain and France. The US will support an arms embargo against South Africa but not an attempt to limit further nuclear development. The Security Council did pass a resolution strongly condemning South African actions and calling for the release of political prisoners.

Economic changes for Israel — The new economic policy of the Israeli government, aimed at creating a new free market economy, is to result in workers' strikes and widespread shoplifting. The changes, which included floating the pound and raising the value-added tax, are expected to cause a ten-percent consumer inflation increase.

Carter opposes Senate energy bill — The Senate has passed its energy bill and sent it to the House-Senate Conference committee. The bill includes more tax credits than taxes and is far removed from Administration proposals. In reaction President Carter has called for a reference to state governors to have time to work on gathering more support for energy legislation he finds more acceptable. These efforts may include a televised talk later this week and cancelling its world tour in late November if problems still remain.

Jail to stay open — The closing of the Charles Street Jail has been postponed by Federal District Judge W. Arthur Garrity. He has told Mayor Kevin White and Chief Dennis Kearney to determine how much money would be needed to prepare the Middlesex County Jail for use by Suffolk County. Garrity then ordered the city council to allocate the necessary sum. The council was extremely upset by the judge's action, which they feel was beyond his authority. They are requesting a stay in the ruling until an appeal can be filed.

Parking ban goes into effect — Parking on several major Boston and Cambridge streets from 7am to 10am on weekdays will be prohibited by Federal District Judge W. Arthur Garrity. He has ordered the city council to allocate the necessary sum. The council was extremely upset by the judge's action, which they feel was beyond his authority. They are requesting a stay in the ruling until an appeal can be filed.
